Debt Plan Brings Rise On World Markets

REACTION FELT ON EXCHANGES OF ALL NATIONS

New York Exchange Has Busiest Opening Since
Crash in 1929 Panic

WAIT FRENCH STAND
Britain Welcomes Hoover's
Plan to Delay Debt Payments for Year

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
President Hoover's proposal for a year's suspension of war debts and repatriation payments was reflected in a strong upswing on the stock markets of the world today.

The New York Stock exchange experienced its busiest opening since the 1929 panic as leading stocks advanced $2 to $15 a share. Frenzied trading, much of it in large blocks, sifted in more than 1,000,000 shares being traded in the first half hour.

German bonds jumped from $10 to $10.50, a 5 per cent rise, and virtually every important commodity market in the country reflected the illustrious interpretation placed on the president's proposal. Cotton in New Orleans and New York advanced about $2.50 to $3.00 a bale. Wheat rose 1/2 cent to 1 1/2 cents a bushel in some places.

The Berlin Bourse responded with boom on all markets, leading shares going up as much as 30 percent. While there was not a minus sign on the whole list when the market closed.

London showed similar activity, stocks going up 4 to 9 points, while Liverpool cotton market opened nationally 34 points higher, later advancing to 41 points increase.
Upper and tin spurted strongly.

Gains in Paris
Paris also showed a gain, the course recovering in considerable depth and prices in some instances advancing 10 per cent with a very narrow closing.

Other corners of the world also reflected buoyancy, in Shanghai barrels of cotton going up 10 per cent;
cotton rallying in Tokyo, while cotton improved on the Bombay market.

There was a general upward movement on the Rome Stock exchange.
While the world's stock markets rushed upward world capitals buzzed wildly as the various governments began consideration of the new debt plan in any acceptance of the president's proposal.
Paris, apparently held the key to the situation and it was understood at the cabinet will consider it tomorrow. The premier and minister finance conferred today.

While the French government has far declined any comment, it is most likely on which the French decision will hinge is on France's willingness or unwilling-ness to permit suspension of that part of German reparations paying reparations in France during a war.

WILD DAY IN NEW YORK
New York—(P)—Caught up by the flood of optimism that swept the world's markets today as a result of Hoover's proposal, Wall-Street celebrated in characteristic fashion the appearance of the sunshine rough the clouds of gloom.

Stocks boiled lustily, stopping now then for a bit of profit-taking, coming out of each recession with renewed enthusiasm for the advance and hundreds of shares touching quotations that were $2 to $10 a share above the Saturday close.
Notably, particularly those of German, were buoyant. Cotton, not to outdone, soared $2.50 to $3 a bale.

37 Tomorrow

PRINCE OF WALES

Prince Still Bachelor On Birthday Eve

London—(P)—The Prince of Wales will be 37 years old tomorrow
—and still a bachelor.

Britain seems to have accepted the situation as his final decision for there isn't even the usual crop of rumors buzzing about his blond head.

For one thing, much of the affection which set old ladies to gossiping over their teacups and maidens sighing, has been transferred from the prince to little Princess Elizabeth.

For another, Wales has changed in this last year from something of a playboy prince whose main job was to inherit the British throne to a business prince who means to help restore Britain's lost trade.

He is an older man, as well, and while even at 37 there is still something boyish about him, he isn't any kid and his public life reflects this change as well. This year he spent nearly four months on his South American trip and its serious purpose was well known.

Since his return he has resumed his various public appearances, but mostly they have had a business angle. His speeches to English business men are example. In many ways his job isn't very interesting, but he works at it like a beaver.

SEEK PERRY ELECTION TO HUBER'S POSITION

Madison—(P)—An attempt will be made to boom Assemblyman Charles Perry, Warwatawa, for lieutenant governor in the next campaign, two of the younger Progressive leaders informed the Associated Press today.

Assemblyman Perry is at present speaker of the assembly, a post he won with virtually no opposition at the start of the legislative session.
He was once a Conservative candidate for governor.

Lieut. Gov. Henry Huber has wielded the gavel in the senate for the past six years but political observers have expressed the opinion that in the last election was not satisfactory. He defeated the Conservative candidate by a comparatively small margin.

BULLETIN

Milwaukee—(P)—An armed, unmasked man held up four persons in the Peoples State bank of Cudahy, a suburb, shortly after noon today and escaped with about $1,200 of the banks funds.

PROPOSAL SENT TO FRENCH BY U. S. EMBASSY

Paris Foreign Office Begins Consideration of Reply to Hoover

Berlin—(P)—Chancellor Bruening
today characterized President Hoover's war debt plan as "an historic event of the very greatest significance" and expressed the German nation's thanks to the United States.

Washington—(P)—The administration today emphasized the necessity for prompt action by all of Germany's creditor nations if the proposal of President Hoover for a one-year moratorium on war debts and repatriations were to have the desired effect.

Secretary Stimson ruled out of the question a suggestion emanating from France for an international conference on the debt question.

The secretary said such a conference was manifestly out of the question if the president's proposal were to have a good effect on the financial situation, since the whole proposal was postulated on speed.

London—(P)—Prime Minister Mac-Donald told the house of commons this afternoon that the British government cordially welcomed the striking declaration on war debts and repatriations payments made by President Hoover.

"The house will not expect me to say more at present," said the prime minister in conclusion.

Stanley Baldwin, leader of the Conservative opposition, who asked the question which drew out the premier's statement, and David Lloyd George, the Liberal leader, both associated themselves with the prime minister's declaration.

Paris—(P)—The American embassy today delivered to the foreign office President Hoover's proposal to postpone war debt and repatriation payments for one year.

The official transmission of the text of the document indicates that Washington will be pleased to receive the official French reaction and conversations were immediately begun for the preparation of a reply.

A meeting of financial experts, including those who took a prominent part in the collaboration on the Young plan and some officials of the Bank of France, was followed by a consultation among Finance Minister Flandin, Premier Laval and Foreign Minister Briand.

They expected to draft the broad lines of the French response which is to be examined at the meeting of the cabinet tomorrow. French officials in view of the importance and delicacy of the question showed a marked tendency today to sidestep comment. They made no predictions of the probable French attitude.

It was made clear, that acceptance of President Hoover's plan would involve a big sacrifice for France in the view of the question of conditional and unconditional reparations payments from Germany.

It was said that any agreement to suspend such payments must have the approval of parliament even if the government decided it was possible.

One idea unofficially advanced was that France might continue to receive unconditional payments with the one year delay and return them to Germany with the other in the form of credits.

AWAIT FRENCH REPLY

Washington—(P)—Upon France's response, more than any other one thing, rests the future of America's offer for a one-year holiday from war debt and repatriations payments.

Great Britain is sympathetic toward the plan; Germany is appreciative; Republican and Democratic

Harbor Facilities Wiped Out By St. John, N. B., Fire; Loss To Run Into Millions

BULLETIN
St. John, N. B.—(P)—A disastrous fire swept the western section of the harbor and parts of the lower town today causing damage which may mount into millions. One unofficial estimate of the loss was $10,000,000 but there was no way of checking this in the confusion.

St. John, N. B.—(P)—A fire of conflagration proportions swept the West St. John waterfront today causing damage which officials feared would mount into millions. Practically the whole harbor commission facilities at West St. John were wiped out. Several warehouses and a grain elevator were destroyed.
Thick black smoke rolled over the harbor and lower town, shutting out the sun until some sections of the city were as dark as night.

Every fireman in the city struggled to combat the blaze with all the apparatus that could be mustered but their battle appeared to be a losing one. Water front tugs attacked the conflagration from the harbor.

The fire was discovered late in the forenoon burning on the wharf of No. 7 shed. A strong wind drove it quickly over a wide area of the shipping district. So rapid was its progress that in half an hour much of the harbor facilities were in flames.

Acts of heroism went almost unnoticed as firemen and volunteers, choking in the blackness, fought to stem the fire. Fifty tons of oil were reported aboard the grain coasting steamer Empress, but fire fighters worked at the grain conveyors nearby until ordered to retire to save their lives. The Canadian Pacific's new grain elevator crumbled gradually and at 1 o'clock p. m. was a smoking ruin.

Shopkeepers frantically carried away goods from ships near the water front and Queen. St. John and Union-sts were crowded with furniture hastily removed from homes.

Firemen dropped huge stones into their small craft to sink them before the flames could reach them, but thousands of dollars worth of fishing nets were destroyed.

A new motorized fire pump, tearing madly to the blaze, crashed through a weakened floor of a shed.
The driver, and a fireman were severely burned before they could be extricated.

THREE BANDITS ROB BADGER ROADHOUSE

Line Patrons Up Against Wall to Search Them—
Flee in Automobile

Houlton, Wis.—(P)—Three masked bandits forced 25 patrons against a wall and escaped with from $700 to $1,000 at the Houlton tavern, night club, here early today.

It was the third roadhouse holdup in six weeks in this vicinity. Houlton is 20 miles from Minneapolis and St. Paul and many of the victims were from there.

While one man with a sawed off shotgun stood guard the other two with revolvers commanded occupants to "get your hands in the air and line up against the wall."

The pockets of men were searched
but the women were not molested.
Then all were forced into the basement and told to "be sure and stay there." The trio fled in an automobile.

Houlton is a community of 400 persons in St. Croix co., one mile from Stillwater, Minn.

NEBRASKA BANK ROBBED

Lynch, Neb.—(P)—Robbers held up the Farmers State bank here this morning and escaped with approximately $2,000. Sam Melcher, vice president of the bank, was alone in the building when the robbers entered quietly. They slugged him, grabbed the money which he was counting and fled.

MILWAUKEE WOMAN MAY DIE OF WOUND

Milwaukee—(P)—Mrs. Ella
Stachurski, wife of Police Sergeant Stanley Stachurski, was in a hospital here today in a critical condition from knife wounds received in a street fight in which she aided her husband. Doctors said she likely would die.

Stachurski, with his wife and son,
Roy, 12, were starting to drive home after visiting relatives last night when the police sergeant saw two men acting in an objectionable manner. He went over to protest and the fight started at once.

Mrs. Stachurski sent her son into the house of Joseph Stachurski, a brother of the policeman, to call while she ran to help her husband.
Before Joseph arrived, Mrs.
Stachurski was slashed in the throat with a pocket knife.

The two men, giving their names
as Stanley Sazuk, 37, and his brother, Frank, 36, were arrested and held in jail. Police said they were intoxicated.

INSECT BITE IS FATAL TO BADGER GUARDSMAN

Wisconsin Rapids—(P)—Relatives
today said funeral services for Lachus Beck, 21 Wisconsin Rapids native, who died from the effects of an insect bite, will be delayed until July 1 to enable his comrades in Battery E, to return from Camp Me-
Coy to accord him a military burial.
Beck was in training at camp and was bitten on the lip by an insect of an unidentified species. The lip swelled rapidly and infection followed. He died in a Sparta hospital Saturday despite an emergency operation.

HEAT WAVE KILLS TWO PERSONS AT CAPITAL

Washington—(P)—Two persons were dead in the capital's heat wave today as other residents awaited the official arrival of summer without hope of much relief. The weather bureau said that when summer came at 4:23 p. m. eastern standard time, it probably would not be "quite so warm" as the 21 yesterday.

DATA ON FILLING STATIONS ASKED IN UPPER HOUSE

Resolution Says Agreements Appear in Conflict With State Law

Madison—(P)—The assembly today adopted a resolution requesting the attorney general to submit an opinion as to the validity of lease and agency agreements, under which a large percentage of the gasoline filling stations of the state are operated.

The measure was introduced by Assemblyman Marshall Reckard, Milwaukee, and states there is reason to believe the agreements are in direct conflict with statutes of the state covering unlawful contracts and conspiracies.

"Wisconsin statutes prohibit monopolistic, unfair and unethical practices which operate to prevent unlawful competition," the resolution said. "There exists a virtual monopoly in the business of retailing gasoline and other petroleum products as indicated by the fact that on May 1 of Milwaukee and filling stations, 606 were controlled by major oil companies either direct ownership or lease and agency agreements, and less than 4 per cent of the retail distribution was through genuinely independent stations."

Against Crime Institute

After having killed the Young bill for establishment of a scientific crime detection institute at the University of Wisconsin, the assembly immediately reconsidered the vote and passed the measure. Introduced by Assemblyman Cornelius T. Young of Milwaukee, the bill appropriates $15,000 yearly for the creation of a bureau containing photographs and fingerprints of criminals. The work of the chemistry, toxicology and pathology departments of the University is correlated in the institute.

The Groves bill appropriating $5, 000 each year for the development of credit unions and declaring a public policy to encourage such institutions was passed. The measure assigns to the state banking department the duty of promoting the extension of credit at the lowest possible rates through credit unions.
Provisions of this bill were carried in the Graves bill for regulation of small loans companies which was killed in the senate where preference was given a bill for outright repeal of the Small Loans law.

The Young bill for repeal of the law permitting graduates of the University of Wisconsin law school to become members of the state bar without taking the bar examination was killed.

RUTH NICHOLS HOPS ON FIRST LEG OF FLIGHT

New York—(P)—In the white and gold monoplane in which she hopes to make the first feminine solo flight across the Atlantic, Ruth Nichols took off from Floyd Bennett airport at 2:22 p. m. (E. S. T.)
today for St. John, N. B.

The big, four-engine monoplane, twice as powerful as Col. Charles Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis," and almost twice as fast, roared about 1,000 feet above the concrete runway and rose easily into a northwest wind.

It circled the field and a few seconds later, its glided wings gleaming in the afternoon sunlight, headed off to the north for repeat of the Miss Nichols will fly directly to St. John without stopping. She will spend the night there, going on to Harbor Grace, N. F., starting point for her Atlantic flight, early tomorrow morning.

Barronett—(P)—Andrew Robertson, president of the Barronett State bank, charged with embezzlement, was listed today as a fugitive from justice. He was arrested in Minneapolis and Governor Olson temporarily suspended extradition of the banker's plea he was arranging to make good the amount of his speculations. Robertson has since disappeared. The bank was closed April 8.

Little Chute Man Drowns In Winnebago

Wilbur Lom, 24, Little Chute, was drowned at 3:30 Sunday afternoon while bathing at the Willows on Lake Winnebago. The body was recovered shortly after.

Lom, with three companions, the Misses Mattie Jansen and Alice Ger-rits and William Jansen, all of Little Chute, were walking hand-in-hand in the water, which was only waist-deep. They stepped off a sandbar, and Jansen, the only member of the party who could swim, rescued the two girls. When he returned, Lom could not be found. After he had died after him several times and could not locate him, he called the cover of Winnebago-co. Shortly after his arrival Jansen located the body.

The body was taken to the Fargo funeral home at Kaukauna. Funeral services will be held at 9 o'clock at St. John church at Little Chute, with the Rev. J. Sprangers in charge. Burial will be in St. John Catholic cemetery at Little Chute.

Survivors are his father, Peter Lom, Little Chute; three brothers, Edmond, and Herbert, Little Chute, and John of Port Edwards; three sisters, Delphine and Mary, Little Chute, and Mrs. Wilmer Versch, Rudolphi.

NAUTILUS TOWED INTO IRISH PORT

Wilkins' Submarine Reaches Harbor After 1,000 Miles in Tow of U. S. Ship

Cork, Irish Free State—(P)—The submarine Nautilus under command of Sir Hubert Wilkins arrived at the outer harbor this morning in tow of the U. S. S. Wyoming.

The arrival of the Nautilus concluded a gruelling 17-day trip across the Atlantic on the first lap of a projected undersea cruise to the North pole. She lost a member of the crew aboard even before she got underway.

The Nautilus left Provincetown, Mass., June 5 under her own power after extensive test runs along the coast. Things went smoothly for about ten days and then trouble began. One of her motors was disabled and her batteries ran low. She was taken in tow by the battleship Wyoming a week ago when she still was 1,000 miles from her destination.

Subsequently, her bridge and periscope were washed away by storms and her tow line parted. Towing gear was again rigged and she proceeded toward the British Isles at a snail's pace. Part of her crew was taken sick and all were sealed inside for strenuous efforts to repair her machinery.

ONE KILLED, SEVEN ARE HURT IN MINE BATTLE

Pittsburgh—(P)—One man was killed and seven others injured in a battle early today between striking coal miners and deputy sheriffs seeking to enforce a court order prohibiting picketing of the Wildwood mine, near here, of the Butler Consolidated Coal company.

About 100 shots were exchanged between the 10 deputies guarding the mine and a crowd of about 250 men and women who marched on the mine in defiance of the court order secured a week ago.

The dead man was a striker.
Among the injured was one of the mine guards.

MEN SEIZED WITH SUDDEN AILMENT DIE

Poisoning Is Suspected as Henry Kopitzke, Louis
Hoffman Are Stricken

HEARING IS POSTPONED Vital Organs, Are Sent to Expert for Chemical Analysis

Death stalked among the dancers at a barn dance on the Harold Douglas farm, Waupaca-co last Saturday evening, stilling the revelry of mer-ymakers when two men were seized, with a sudden and mysterious ailment which took their lives in a few minutes.

Physicians who were called to attend the stricken men arrived too late, but following an examination, they reported they believed death was caused by poisoning, probably strychnine. Liquor flowed freely at the dance, it was reported, and Sheriff Arthur Steenbeck of Wau-paca, who also was called to the scene, confiscated about 10 bottles of liquor which he found about the place. He said he would hold the liquor for analysis in case a test is sought.

The dead men are Henry Kopitzke, 48, a widower and father of five children, and Louis Hoffman, 35, a World War veteran and father of three children. Both men were New London farmers.

Physicians were asked to examine several other men, who became frightened and believed they might be stricken with the same ailment.
No other cases were found, however.

Hearing Postponed
Coroner Adam Schelder and Sheriff Steenbeck immediately launched an investigation and impounded a coroner's jury. The hearing was postponed, however, pending an examination of the vital organs of the two dead men by Dr. E. P. Miloslavich, Milwaukee, an expert on chemical analysis of this nature.

Attending physicians expressed the belief that the deaths might have resulted from strychnine because the symptoms displayed before and after death were similar to those experienced with other strychnine poisonings. The doctor said he was unable to find the strychnine in the stomach, but the strychnine it had been placed in a bottle of liquor.
The seizures of both men were accompanied by violent cramps, convulsions and spasms. They retained consciousness until their deaths.
The doctors said. After death rigor mortis set in immediately and although the physicians arrived in a few minutes, the bodies were rigid when they got there. If the men had been suffering from alcohol poisoning, the doctors pointed out, the symptoms would have been entirely different.

The two New London men went to the Douglas farm, which is located on County Trunk X, about six and a half miles from New London.
In a car driven by Edward Risko.
Those in the party included, Mr. and Mrs. Forester Poppy, Mr. and Mrs.
Louis Hoffman, Miss Katherine
Johnson, Miss Rashad, Monsieur, Kopitzke and Risko. They left New London about 10 o'clock.

Complains of Cramps
Shortly before 11 o'clock, Kopitzke was dancing a square dance with Mrs. Hoffman when he complained of cramps. These become so violent he was forced to leave the hall.
About the same time Hoffman, who was sitting with friends, was stricken and left the hall. Within minutes Hoffman was dead and Kopitzke died a few minutes later. The dancers were thrown into a panic and the music stopped as the crowd gathered about the two men until the doctors arrived. Attempts to administer first aid only appeared to make them worse, because as soon as they were touched by their friends they were attacked by convulsions.

Neither of the men had been drinking, Mrs. Hoffman said later. It also was brought out that neither of the men had had anything to eat for several hours before going to the dance. Witnesses were unable to throw any light on the cause of the deaths.

The possibility of a suicide pact was abandoned when it was learned from Mrs. Hoffman that there was no reason for such a move. Both men were employed, neither had financial worries, and the widow declared they were on friendly terms.

U. S. Needs New Industrial Leadership, U. W. Head Declares

WARNS AGAINST ALIEN THREAT TO ITS SYSTEM

Sen. Thomas J. Walsh and Four Others Receive Honorary Degrees

Madison—(AP)—The University of Wisconsin will graduate its 73th class here today with ceremonies for 1,400 seniors and 200 recipients of higher degrees. Sen. Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, an alumnus, and four other men will receive honorary degrees.

After several years of only moderate success in Randall stadium, because of weather the commencement will be held indoors. The new men's field house will be the scene of the ceremonies, and Gov. Philip LaFollette is to bring the state's greetings; and Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the university, is to speak briefly before the honored procession files past and receive diplomas.

Senator Walsh, with Dr. John R. Commons, Wisconsin professor and widely known economist; and Dr. Harry F. Ward, professor at Union Theological seminary and director of the Civil Liberties union, will receive the honorary degree of doctor of laws. Dr. Irving W. Bailey, Harvard university biologist, will be recipient of the honorary doctor of science, while Charles E. Brown, director of the State Historical Museum here, is to be given the degree of doctor of arts.

Speaking to the graduates at the commencement ceremonies yesterday, President Frank warned that America must develop a political and business leadership and "followership" if its system of free capitalism and political liberty is not to be replaced by a "better planned" or "less desirable" national economy.

"If business and the industrial system of the United States cannot, or does not, in the long run give as good guarantees of security, leisure, and self-respect to the masses as an Italy or Russia, then the system of free capitalism will take its place among the dead systems of history," he said.

Types of Leadership
The nation, he said, needs three main types of leadership—that of the enunciator, that of the executive and that of the exemplar. The enunciator he defined as persons "able to put into plain and compelling words either what the masses want or what the masses should want"; executives were called those who can translate convictions of the masses into programs of actions; and exemplars were termed the living examples of what the masses aspire.

"The United States," he said, "languishes just now for economic, political and social leadership into the making of which have gone Wilson's gift for clear and compelling enunciation of the forces to be fought and the goals to be gained; a Mussolini's gift for decisive action; and a Gandhi's gift for moving vast masses by the power of indisputable sincerity."

Dr. Frank warned against the danger of permitting "emotionalized issues" to sidetrack urgent economic problems and illustrated his meaning by defining the prohibition question as an emotionalized issue.

"Until we broaden this issue and deal with its wider aspects," he said, "prohibition will continue to make American politics a high carnival of hypocrisy."

The business depression, Dr. Frank said, resulted "not from failure to master want, but through our failure to manage plenty."

"Famine of Leadership"
"We are a nation of mild-meds," he said, "if the books were closed now, we should go down in history as a people strangled by its own successes. The famine from which we are suffering is a famine of leadership."

The country was victimized by leaders who failed to lead before the market crash, he said.

Dr. Frank contended there was a need for reconsidering "traditional conceptions of national policy" and that competition must be recast.

"Today the United States may find competition quite as dangerous as uncontrolled monopoly," he said. "We wait for a leadership that will help us think less about the theories of individualism and more about the tragedies of individuals to the end that we may evolve political and economic policies to protect and promote the best interests of the individual American."

15 BOUQUETS OF FLOWERS GIVEN TO RIVERVIEW FOLKS

Fifteen bouquets of flowers from the Appleton flower show were distributed to patients at Riverview sanatorium Sunday night after the show had closed. Fluffy peonies, tall sturdy gladiolus, frail baby's breath, Canterbury bells, daisies, rose, carnations, and Sweet William helped to cheer the rooms of patients whose families are too far away to keep their rooms supplied with summer flowers. Although the blossoms had been on display at the Armory for two days the more hardy ones were still fresh enough to make bouquets.

FIREMANSHIP SCHOOL SCHEDULED FOR WEEK

Madison—(AP)—Several hundred representatives of local fire departments will meet here for the third annual "firemanship school" to be conducted by the University of Wisconsin. The school will open tomorrow and continue five days.

Latest developments in fire-fighting science will be given the "students" by experts, some active firemen and others affiliated with fire prevention associations.

Among the speakers are: W. C. Norton, Winona, Minn., fire chief; Eugene Hackett, Milwaukee fire prevention bureau; J. E. Florin, state superintendent of fire prevention; R. H. Drumm, Green Bay fire chief; J. J. Kupfle, Manitowish fire chief; A. J. Rahn, Two Rivers fire chief; and F. McGlathlin, La Crosse, chief.

ISSUE WARNING ON RIDING OF BICYCLES

A warning issued this week by Captain P. J. Vaughn, acting chief of police here, calls attention of Appleton bicycle owners to the fact that it is unlawful to carry a second passenger on the bars or handle. State law prohibits this practice. Captain Vaughn pointed out, and urged closer observance of this regulation. The captain also pointed out that, despite the law, there always is the danger of serious accidents occurring when this practice is followed. He pointed to the fact that last week a small boy suffered a fractured leg while riding on the handle of a bicycle when his foot became caught in the wheel.

ATTEND LA FOLLETTE MEMORIAL SERVICE

Congressman George J. Schneider, Judge Theodore Berg, F. E. Bachman, city treasurer, Mr. and Mrs. John Moran, and Alderman Theodore McGlathlin from Menasha, attended the LaFollette Memorial service at Rosehill cemetery Saturday. After the service they attended the reception given by Governor and Mrs. Philip LaFollette, Senator and Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette, and Senator and Mrs. John J. Blaine at the executive mansion.

FIREMEN CALLED
The fire department was called to a flat occupied by two families at 213 E. Franklin-st about 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon when a fire started on the first floor. The cause of the blaze is unknown, but it was put out before serious damage resulted. Arthur Wetzel resides on the second floor and Edward Casper resides on the first floor.

REJOICING IN GERMANY OVER HOOVER PLAN

Foreign Minister Curtius Calls Proposal "Gift from Heaven"

Berlin—(AP)—Germany has accepted, with nationwide rejoicing President Hoover's offer to defer for one year payments on inter-government war debts.

In announcing its adherence yesterday, the government expressed the hope that Great Britain and Italy also would fall into line with the American plan to end world-wide economic depression. Though it was admitted that France annually receives about twice as much in reparations as she pays in war debts, it was hoped she too would become a party to the agreement.

Describing President Hoover's proposal as a "gift from heaven," Foreign Minister Julius Curtius said: "He has placed his finger on the sore spot and now comes one of those rare moments in history when all reserve should be thrown aside. I can only say that we endorse with unqualified joy the heroic declaration which President Hoover has made."

"Not only will it lighten our burden, it will remedy the situation throughout the world. I don't care what people say about lower prices and such-like economic factors; at the bottom of it all is lack of confidence. That is the decisive factor and Mr. Hoover has been quick to see it and to realize that is where decisive action is needed."

Thanks Ambassador "I express our deep appreciation for the services of Ambassador Sackett in bringing about this action. This wise, quiet man long has advocated solution along the lines which Mr. Hoover now proposes."

Germany's foreign policy of conciliation and cooperation had been vindicated by the turn of events, Curtius said.

"It took an iron nerve to hold out when on every side there was clamor for haste," he continued. "Chancellor Brüning and his whole cabinet have clung tenaciously to the position that the United States was the deciding factor and that nothing should be done to check the efforts of the American government."

Dr. Curtius recognized that acceptance of the plan by France would entail greater sacrifice and bought her cooperation for the common good. "I do not hesitate to recognize this truth fully and appreciatively," he said. "And everything possible will be done by Germany to make it easy for France to accept. We have but one wish—to put an effective stop to the world economic crisis and we want to cooperate with France, toward that end in every possible manner."

Front ends of both cars were damaged.

This Man Has Been Killed 402 Times In Last 20 Years

BY JESSIE HENDERSON (Copyright 1931 by Cons. Press)

Hollywood—(CPA)—Fred Kelsey has been shot and killed 402 times in the past 20 years and is all set to get bumped off again in the interests of celluloid justice. He's going to be killed by a machine gun in a new picture of the underworld, but machine guns are just another kick to a man who has been bounced into the beyond by rifle, shotgun, automatic, civil war cannon, French artillery, and beautifully engraved Spanish firearms since 1909 when he began his life and death in Hollywood.

"I'm not a bad fellow at heart," Kelsey admitted today, "my trouble appears to be bad associates. I get in with the wrong crowd and first thing you know the cops bust down the door and I'm dead as a doornail. They never miss me. Other desperate characters jump through a window or hide under a table, but I'm the boy that stops the bullet every time. Frequently more than one bullet, too. I must be carrying around at least 500 or 600 celluloid bullets in my heart this minute. Now and then, just to make it harder, the sheriff changes me over half of California, up mountains, down cliffs, through deserts, in and out of caves. Does it do me any good to cower behind a rock as big as a house or beat it lickety-split into a forest where even an elephant could hide? Not a chance. My pursuers have the goldranded accurate aim you ever saw. It's got so that if a car back fires on Hollywood-blvd I grab my throat and do a fall."

Kelsey heaved a sigh but immediately brightened.

"I pay 'em back, though," he remarked cheerily, "because while I've been killed 402 times, I've also made 700 arrests."

As a matter of fact Kelsey is known as chief detective of the screen because he plays a big percentage of the detectives, police judges, inspectors, and cops in pictures. "Real policemen tell him he looks, walks, talks and acts like a cop."

Enough headquarters bull. This isn't surprising in view of dual personality, for when he isn't a crook pursued by a cop he's a cop pursuing a crook.

"I'm a deputy sheriff, too," Kelsey said. "I mean, a real one with a real badge. But I've never had occasion to use that badge and I hope I never will."

How much time, you inquired, had Kelsey spent investigating prisoners to get the lowdown on both the prisoner and the policeman? Kelsey laughed. "Me?" he replied. "I've never been inside a real jail or a police station in my life. The thought of them gives me the willies."

At the age of 34, Edward A. Probst, Civil War veteran of Greenville, Ill., is the father of an eight and one-half pound son.

DOMESTIC SERVICE IS EXEMPTED FROM "DOLE" IN BRITAIN

Agricultural Workers Only Other Employed Class Not Contributing

(Editors Note: Are married women entitled to unemployment insurance benefits? The dispute over this question in England has created furor and Edward Stanley, Associated Press staff writer, describes its significance in this third article in a series of five on the English "Dole.")

BY EDWARD STANLEY

London—(AP)—One of the biggest fields of work for women in England is untouched by the national compulsory unemployment insurance. This is domestic service.

Women in any enterprise conducted for profit are included, but domestic workers are exempted. Partly this is because wages are so low that to deduct a contribution for insurance—if only a few pence—would be a hardship. It also is difficult to estimate the value of "living in." For much the same reasons agricultural workers are exempted. They are the only two classes.

There is a shortage of domestic servants and this may be one of the reasons that it is difficult to induce girls to accept such employment. Once in domestic service and out of a job there are no unemployment insurance benefits and the actual wages would not be much above the amount she would ordinarily draw.

If, however, the scheme is extended it might mean a re-allocation of the labor supply which would bring a little relief.

There has been agitation for insurance to cover domestic and agricultural workers, and it is entirely possible that it will be worked out. Waitresses, for example, and mill hands are insured at present. There are, in round numbers, 300,000 women workers insured and probably 500,000 drawing benefit. About 30 per cent of the total are married women and about half of those unemployed are married.

About them centers much excited argument. It takes much the same form as arguments about employment of married women.

Married Women Problem
It is argued that married women do not need the benefit, that they have no intention of seeking re-employment, and that they really aren't available for work.

It is one of the toughest problems of the whole puzzle. Many firms do not employ married women. When a single girl working for them marries she almost automatically becomes unemployed. Frequently home duties keep her from accepting other part-time employment. Sometimes she has no intention of ever hunting other work, but intends to get the extra shillings in unemployment benefit shillings. When possible the labor exchange

Enigma Of Empty Space Still Baffles Scientists

(Empty space is the greatest challenge before the physicist today, says Dr. P. C. Brown, prominent physicist, who calls it "nothing more than a mathematical conception with little more tangible foothold than the soul of eternity.")

Dr. Brown tells how the Michelson and Morley experiment started a "scandal" about the ether in the following article—one of a series on "What's Going on in the World Today."

BY DR. P. C. BROWN (Copyright 1931 by Associated Press)

New York—(AP)—Just as we begin to think that physics has solved the millions of mysteries pertaining to matter and energy, we wake up suddenly to the fact that the greatest mysteries of all are staring us in the face. Among these is the enigma of empty space.

Prior to the time of the famous Michelson and Morley experiment on ether drag, we were fairly content to fill all empty space with other matter, and to define its properties and purposes as fully and accurately as was done for matter itself. The ether was readily absorbed the burden of transmitting light, heat, electricity, magnetism, and possibly the force of gravitation.

The evidence of the Michelson and Morley experiment started such a scandal about the ether that the word is almost taboo among scientists and today space is nothing more than a mathematical conception with little more tangible foothold than the soul of eternity.

Even in our solar system that ratio between empty space and the volume occupied by matter is so great that the figures are almost meaningless and yet in some manner extraordinary light, heat, electricity, magnetism, and gravitation and matter itself are transmitted through it.

Within the hydrogen atom for example the empty space as compared with the space occupied by electrons and protons is almost as much longer as is the empty space in the solar system longer than the space filled by the sun and planets.

If the inhabitants of New York city were distributed throughout the solid part of the earth, the space between people would correspond relatively to the empty space between electrons in the atom. But somehow there must be some mechanism in this empty space inside the atom that permits the electrons and protons to maintain their existence, and this mechanism must be just as much a part of reality as are the electrons themselves. Empty space is the greatest challenge before the physicists today. To say that empty space is curved, or finite, or infinite, or limitless is only to make postulates that sooner or later will require satisfaction with observation and experiment.

Whatever the outcome, it should be remembered that women vote in England now.

RETAIN TENNIE AS LEADER OF MAIL CARRIERS

Ladies Auxiliary to County Organization Is Effected

Joseph Tennie, a rural mail carrier at the Appleton post office, was elected president of the Outagamie County Rural Mail Carriers' association at the annual meeting and picnic yesterday at Alliea park. During the day the wives of the rural carriers organized a ladies auxiliary of the association. Mrs. Tennie was elected president of the new unit.

All other officers of the carriers' association were re-elected. They are: William Oaks, Shiocton, vice president; L. F. Mory, Black Creek, treasurer; and Frank Heagle, Seymour, secretary. Other officers of the ladies auxiliary are Mrs. Wilbur Mory, Kaukauna, vice president; Mrs. Frank Heagle, Seymour, secretary; and Mrs. Arnold Fetting, Appleton, treasurer.

Five delegates were named by the carriers' association to attend the annual convention of the Wisconsin Rural Mail Carriers' association at Marshfield on July 27, 28 and 29. They are Mr. Tennie, Mr. Heagle, Mrs. Riesenweber, Appleton, Mrs. Arnold Fetting, Appleton, and Frank Bleick, Black Creek.

The carriers adopted a resolution expressing their thanks and appreciation to the county highway commission and to the state and federal officials for their aid in the way of snow removal during the last winter. Copies of a resolution are to be mailed to the county and town officials. The carriers then heard officers, reports and held an open forum discussion of service problems.

OLD WATER AIDS DAIRY INDUSTRY

Running Well or Spring Systems Help Wisconsin Reputation

Running well or spring water has a lot to do with the reputation which Wisconsin enjoys in the production of high quality dairy products. Especially during the coming summer months will cold water be of greatest service to Outagamie dairymen in the prompt and rapid cooling of their milk and cream, according to Gus Sell, county agent.

This process, so necessary to the production of high grade dairy products, has been found to be most effectively done by stirring the milk or cream several times at ten minute intervals after it is placed in the water of the cooling tank. While so doing the cover of the tank is removed, permitting air to get to it, and the stirring breaks down the curd.

By stirring at ten minute intervals, milk or cream can be cooled to near the water temperature in 30 to 40 minutes while with no stirring the temperature drop may be only a few degrees.

Cooling milk or cream to a temperature of 50 degrees Fahrenheit less has been found to give the best results. Where water is used for this purpose, the well does not deliver water that cold, one can only do best under the circumstances which is to cool the product as quickly as possible to the water temperature.

A cooling tank, protected from the rays, and large enough to permit free circulation of water and enough that the milk level in it can be below the water level in the tank will be found most satisfactory. It may even be worth while to locate the tank to hold the low temperatures. L. C. Thomsen, of the Wisconsin college of agriculture, has found that on the average dairy where ice was used, a three percent saving of eighty dollars a year in ice was made.

A prompt and rapid cooling of milk and cream, although of special importance during the hot weather, has been found so essential to production of high quality products at all times that it is being practiced more and more the year around, even during the cold winter months.

Fishermen Can't Expect Good Luck Every Trip

BY B. A. CLAFLIN

I just received a letter from a man who has just completed a stay of a week in one of the best fishing regions in northern Wisconsin. He complained about the fishing he had. In fact, he stated that during the whole week he caught but a couple fish, and he states he used "everything in the way of lures." Apparently he came to me in desperation, or perhaps, he considers me somewhat responsible. I have to give him credit for one thing, however. He is going up again in the near future, and this time, with my advice he "is going to catch fish."

About all I can do is tell him where and how I had very good luck on the trip that I have just completed. I am writing him to the effect that I caught all the wall-eyes I wanted, in fact, I let the smaller ones go. And I caught northern pike, but those I gave to some natives on the stream. Also, had a tussle with a scragging musky of Catfish waters. I am sorry to have land him, however, that I failed to land him. This is the way it happened: At the time I got the strike I was using one of my light No. 10 bamboo rods—a very flexible and dainty one.

I had been catching wall-eyes and the little rod was plenty heavy enough to handle them. Then, at the edge of the sunken stump into which you encounter just before you go into Catfish lake, I made a cast into a dark hole and retrieved my plug to within a few feet of the boat, when suddenly Sir Maskinoshie leaped clear of the water in his eagerness to hit the lure.

He hooked himself, but immediately dove to the bottom and under the old sunken snag. I could see him down there but could not disengage the line from the root. I worked long and diligently to pry him loose but at last was forced to give up and let him go.

As I wrote the man who wrote me in regard to his poor luck, if you want to catch fish you must go after them at the right time, and in the right place. I knew there were plenty of nice wall-eyes in the water I was fishing but could not get a rise during the warm hours of the day. So I went after them from sundown on. Along about seven o'clock they began hitting. And I wish to make it clear that I was not using minnows which almost everybody uses for them.

I desired to take them on artificial lures, and I succeeded. I actually caught several very good ones on a floating mouse, one of the gray Heddens. I have caught many wall-eyes on artificial lures, but that was the first time I ever took them on a floating mouse. As a rule, they will hit a red and white deep scale finish, providing you get it down where they are. But the evening I refer to they rose to the surface and took the floater I was using.

To sum matters up, if you want real wall-eye fishing go out after them when the sun is down and fish as late as you wish. You may get them during the day, but you will always get them after dusk.

bers will swim in clear cold water, fish and go boating, enjoy study periods, play games and roam about through the 200 acres of woodland which is connected with the camp. The camp enrollment is limited to 150 from the four counties and the county leaders are urging club members to register at once so they will be certain to get a place.

Four-H club members of Outagamie are being informed by Miss Harriet Thompson, county home demonstration agent and Gus Sell, county farm agent, of plans for the annual county 4-H club camp which will be conducted this year from July 13 to 18, inclusive. The camp will be held at the Twin Lakes Boy Scout camp in northern Waushara, about 12 miles south of Waupaca.

Valley Boy Scouts are camping at this spot this summer, and Outagamie club officials decided they would join with 4-H club groups from Waushara, Waupaca and Winnebago for a bigger and better camp this year. The last two years the county club camp was conducted at Camp Chicagami on Lake Winnebago.

This year the camp will be divided into two periods, one from Sunday to Wednesday and the other from Wednesday to Saturday afternoon. The cost of the camp is the same as last year, $3 for three days. This cost includes everything except blankets. Four-H club members

Appleton Leads State In Employment Conditions, Report Says

ALL PLANTS IN OPERATION IN MONTH OF MAY

Outdoor Work Prospers—$155,615 in Building Authorized by Permits

By RUBY A. BLACK

(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau) Washington—Employment conditions during May seemed more favorable in Appleton than in any other of the 16 Wisconsin cities reporting, judging from the United States Employment Service's monthly announcements.

In Appleton all plants were in operation, the report says, although several paper mills worked on a 4-day-week basis. On the other hand one paper mill increased its force. A knitting mill operated below normal schedule but increased operating at the beginning of June, while another knitting mill increased its force.

Outdoor work, including building and street and road work, prospered. Building permits were issued representing an expenditure of $155,615 and calling for the erection of 880,000 cubic feet of structure, a $15,000 bank addition, a $30,000 residence, several filling stations, commercial structures and small dwellings. Contracts were awarded for state and county highway construction and four miles of street paving. About 60 men were employed on the construction of a state and county bridge to cost $275,000.

Steel Plant Operating
A steel plant in the city operated on an average schedule of 10 to 14 hours a day and engaged additional help in May but, on the other hand, subnormal schedules continued in wire factories, machine shops, foundries, and woodworking establishments.

For the state as a whole, the report says:

"Restricted schedules prevailed in the majority of the plants in operation and a surplus of labor was apparent in nearly every section of the state.

Part-time schedules prevailed in the paper mills, rubber and shoe shops, woodworking establishments, machine shops, knitting mills, foundries, metal-working plants and several other industries. Several manufacturing establishments maintained satisfactory schedules and in some instances additional workers were engaged.

Docks Below Normal
"Coal docks operated below normal and there was a considerable decrease in this employment. Building continued in fair volume in a few places but an oversupply of these craftsmen prevailed. There was a seasonal increase in forces employed in the railroad maintenance of way and construction departments. State and county road work, bridges, public utility construction, municipal improvements, and grade elimination and railroad crossing projects furnished employment to many laborers. Lake navigation increased giving work to a number of men. Sufficient farm help was available in all communities."

Slightly more hopeful reports were made for Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Minnesota. Most of the increased employment was caused by seasonal increases, slightly more than usual, in outdoor work. All states, however, reported surplus of workers in almost every line.

For the country as a whole, agriculture naturally registered the greatest increase in workers, industrial operations practically stood still while mining registered a seasonal decrease in employment.

DISCUSSION OF PLANT DISEASES FEATURE OF SHOW

More Exhibits, Larger Attendance This Year, Officials Report

The discussion and display of plant diseases under the supervision of Otto H. Richter of the entomology department of the state department of agriculture, was one of the highlights of the third annual flower show given in the Armory Saturday and Sunday by the Flower and Garden division of the chamber of commerce.

The flower show was the largest and most successful show ever held in Appleton, with more than 9,000 people attending. This year's show indicated that there is a greater community interest in the show in that many more amateurs entered flowers than before.

The entomology department display was in the form of a miniature forest, which showed several plants struck with disease and others in a healthful condition for a contrast. Mr. Richter spent Saturday morning visiting Appleton gardens and beauty places in search of diseased specimens, while he displayed at the show. He discussed the nature of various diseases and the care that should be given to certain plants, shrubs, trees and bushes to alleviate the blight. He explained how to avoid the white grub on lawns and shrubbery, and related the extensive damage that this disease can do. The state display showed the common diseases that attack iris, cedars, and other flowers. Many descriptive pamphlets on diseases were given out to interested flower growers.

The show closed at 6 o'clock Sunday evening. All prizes and ribbons which were not called for will be mailed to the winners by Miss Cora Guenther, secretary of the flower and garden division. The vases which were not collected may be obtained from Schlitz West End drug store by presenting the identification number. The five special prizes awarded were given by the Hawthorne Gardens, Green Bay. Charles Boyd of the Appleton Coated Paper Co. displayed the green paper for the tables.

Mrs. D. J. O'Connor supervised the show with a committee to assist her. The prize winners will be announced later.

Mr. and Mrs. Schubert and Mr. and Mrs. Schaefer, who attended the commencement, plan to be in Madison for the dedication of the new engineering building.

WARMER WEATHER IS FORECAST TUESDAY

Believe it or not—the highest temperature Sunday was 91 degrees. It was only for a few minutes shortly after noon when the skies cleared and the sun shown with tropical intensity that offset cooling breezes from the north. The lowest temperature recorded Monday morning was 64 degrees.

Unsettled weather will be the lot of Appleton and the Fox river valley Monday night and Tuesday, according to predictions, and Tuesday will be slightly warmer. A shift in the wind to southeast will bring the warmer breeze.

The heat wave of Thursday, Friday and Saturday ended abruptly Saturday afternoon when the wind shifted to west and then northwest and north, sending the mercury scurrying downward. Saturday night was almost cold and Sunday morning the golfers shivered. Showers visited the city Sunday morning and with those of last night brought .16 of an inch rainfall.

SUMMER SAUNTERS IN TODAY, BUT IT FEELS LIKE FALL

Seemingly rebellious against the say-so of the Almanac, which dictates that the season of hot weather and dry wind should arrive on June 22, summer sauntered in at 4:25 this morning behind a screen of rain. Any one of the last 10 days would have been an ideal day for summer's debut, but the day chosen by the Almanac has all the earmarks of a damp, dreary fall day.

Today is also considered the longest day of the year, but in reality it is no longer than the last two days and the coming two days. From Saturday to Thursday the sun rises at 4:22 in the morning and sets at 7:41 in the evening.

TRADE EXPANSION SALE SUCCESSFUL

Merchants Well Pleased With Way Three-day Event Was Patronized

Appleton merchants were checking their stock Monday morning after the three-day trade expansion sale of last week which brought thousands of persons to the city for bargains that have not been equalled in many years.

All the merchants were highly pleased with the success of the sale, the first ever held during June. Indications are that next year the event will be repeated.

"Many people who had not traded in Appleton for years visited the city during the period," one merchant said, "and they'll return again. Appleton merchants, by their bargain prices, have won the future business of all these people."

On Thursday, the opening day of the sale, College-ave was almost packed with shoppers. The intense heat may have kept a few people at home, but most of them were willing to brave the sun's rays. Friday a lull was reported by a few merchants, but it was only the "lull before the storm," for the final day saw more people than had turned out Thursday.

Wednesday morning the merchants will hold their regular retail meeting at the chamber of commerce, discuss details of the event, and make plans for next season.

The trade expansion sale was conceived by the retailers several months ago as a step to stir up interest in Appleton business opportunities, and to give buyers a merchandising event featuring numerous bargains for years.

In recent years the first summer months have been neglected as far as sales events are concerned, but from now on "the trade expansion sale" will be a regular occurrence.

ATTEND ALUMNI DINNER AT STATE UNIVERSITY

Several Appleton people were present at a dinner Saturday night at the Memorial Union building at Madison for alumni of various classes of the university which were holding reunion activities over the weekend. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baker, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. John Morgan, Miss Carrie Morgan, and Mrs. L. C. Sleeper.

An outstanding feature of the dinner was the unveiling and presentation of a bust of the Hon. Burr V. Jones by alumni of the law school to the university. A daughter of Mr. Jones unveiled the bronze bust, and the presentation speech was made by Judge George Kroncke, Milwaukee, of the class of 1870. It was received by Prof. Oliver F. Rundell, dean of the law school. President Glenn Frank gave the principal address.

FARMERS FORGET WORK TO ATTEND GRANGE PICNIC

Work of Organization Outlined in Several Addresses

BY W. F. WINSEY
Greenville—Busy farmers and their wives and children left their homes Saturday to attend the annual picnic of the South Greenville Grange the big education and amusement event of the year in this locality. George E. Schaefer, master of the local Grange, welcomed the crowd.

Long tables were erected on the north side of the Grange hall on which the women served a basket picnic dinner cafeteria style. The picnic dinner served by the women of the South Greenville Grange was the chief attraction of the kind in this part of Outagamie-co.

In the forenoon the juvenile grange staged a literary and musical program under the supervision of Mrs. George Adam, who accompanied to the piano. The Neenah high school band entertained during the day. After dinner Mr. Schaefer, Herman Ihde and James E. Farmer, lecturer of the National Grange, addressed the audience. At the conclusion of this program of speaking, the Grange baseball team looked over the field of the Outagamie Milk and Produce Co., Appleton.

Mr. Farmer discussed "The Call of the Grange," holding that that call proposes organization of farmers to improve agriculture and rural life.

Grange Call Lasts
"You have heard calls from groups for the improvement of agriculture that have come and gone, but the call of the Grange has continued for the past 65 years," he said. "When the call of the Grange was the loudest, 75 per cent of the farmers were members of the Grange."

"Why is it the Grange has 800,000 members and what are the calls of the Grange? The builder of the Grange started those calls 65 years ago."

"The call of the Grange is designed to induce farmers to organize in an agricultural body. The Grange calls together all farmers even those who are not seen in lodges, community organizations or in churches. The purpose of the call is to have a united agriculture."

"The Grange through its membership power prevented the renewal of the patents on sewing machines. As a result every woman bought her sewing machine at a saving of 25 per cent."

"The call of the Grange brought free delivery of mail to rural people."

"Lately the tariffs were increased on 2,000 manufactured products but only on 100 products of the farms. The National Grange was instrumental in taxing the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine that was threatening the products of 1,250,000 dairy cows in this country that consumed over 2,000,000 tons of hay yearly. Service in this capacity was obtained by the call of the Grange."

Meeting in Wisconsin
Mr. Ihde announced that for the first time in history the annual meeting of the National Grange will be held in Wisconsin. He considers that a Wisconsin people to get in closer touch with the work and purposes of the Grange.

"Unless we get group action we cannot get what is due to agriculture," Mr. Ihde said. "Until we farmers get together we shall not be able to pull ourselves out of the present agricultural depression. I want to impress upon you farmers the necessity of cooperation in all our activities."

Sheriff Lappen was called to investigate. Entrance was gained by breaking through a side door. Exit was made through the office door, which they left open. The safe was moved from the office to the workshop, where a large sledge was used to force open the door. The burglars took only the cash leaving a number of checks on top of the safe. ## HOOVER PLAN BRINGS BOOM ON EXCHANGES

Upswing Follows in Prices on All Principal Stock Markets in World

dale. Other commodities responded with less spectacular gains. It was a wild opening on the stock exchange. Shorts, badly pinched by the feverish advance with which last week's trading was concluded, were thrown into renewed confusion by a momentary drop in the price of shares changed hands at advanced prices running up to $15 and there was no let up in the pace until the first half hour had been passed. The turnover during that period was a million shares. Not in a long time had the market begun a trading day with so violent a rally.

When the first frenzied demands of the shorts had been satisfied, profits began to be taken quickly and reactions for a dollar or two from the early highs developed. However, the momentum of the advance was not so easily lost and by early afternoon another upward drive was in progress although this, too, encountered a reaction as traders hastened to accept fat profits.

Numerous Gains
United States Steel Common and American Telephone soared $4 a share. Union Pacific, Eastman Kodak, Indianapolis, Public Service of New Jersey, National and Canadian and American Smelting climbed $4 to $5. Auburn Auto whose $15 opening advance took the day's prize, moved back in the direction of its top price after half of the initial advance had been lost. Many issues were $2 to $3, including General Motors which had opened $2 higher on a 20,000 share block.

The rise in German bonds listed on the New York exchange was substantial, although not quite as large as last Saturday's when the first rebound on the Washington news occurred. Nevertheless, the Young plan $100 bond about 3 per cent, gained more than $20 per $100 bond and the Dawes 5s were up more than $10. Many issues of German industries, public utilities and municipalities displayed more spectacular strength. Trading in the group was so active that a two minute information was called soon after the opening as dealers caught up with the deluge of orders.

European exchanges, opening several hours before the New York markets, set Wall-st a lofty example. Prices on the Paris Bourse rolled upward in one of the strongest sessions in recent times, with big gains, and the run on the Reichsbank's gold reserve, which had been sharply depressed last week, was said to have stopped. Securities in London, Paris and Amsterdam responded substantially.

WELCOMED BY BRITAIN
London—Great Britain today welcomed President Hoover's proposal to postpone for a year further payments, principal and interest, on the reparations and war debt accounts, the London markets reacting favorably and in some cases sensationally.

In authoritative quarters it was said that official acceptance would be withheld for Prime Minister MacDonald to make this afternoon in the house of commons. The president's action was described as having come at a psychological moment to stave off European economic disaster and to aid world financial recovery.

As seen in official circles, the entire question now must form the subject of an exchange of views between the interested governments. It is not believed that these necessarily will take the form of a new international conference, at least immediately, but that these probably will be conducted at long range between Washington, Berlin, Paris, Rome Brussels and other interested capitals.

It was stressed that Great Britain, however, is less directly interested in the situation than almost any other nation concerned, since under the terms of the Balfour note, her incoming reparations account and war debt payments approximately balance each other.

France is viewed in particular as being in a more difficult position than Great Britain since her incoming reparations this year are about $78,000,000 in excess of the amount which she would have to pay on her war debt account to Great Britain, the United States and other creditors.

Since the last week by Sheriff John Lappen and a squad of deputies, the resort house has been closed. Thieves broke into the place last week and carried off the equipment and supplies, including the cash register. They also stole Meyer's car and took three wheels off Apitz' machine. ## THE POSSIBILITY OF INVESTIGATION OF RESIGNATION

Professor Claims He Lost Job Because of Political Views

Post-Crescent (Washington Bureau) Washington—News of the forced resignation of a Wisconsin University professor, Prof. Ralph W. Keahey, from the staff of Butler University in Indianapolis, "because of his liberal views," and alleged boycott for the future against Wisconsin professors, as reached the headquarters of the American Association of University Professors here and may result in an investigation.

"I was forced to resign because of political views and teachings in conflict with the policy of the university," Prof. Keahey has been reported as saying, although he has not lodged an official complaint with the association.

Five hundred Butler students did, however, petition officers of the college and board of trustees to consider Prof. Keahey's resignation. They claim that the former Wisconsin professor was fired because of his views on U. S. intervention in Nicaragua and his discussions of the injustices of taxation in America but this is denied by board members who claim that Professor Keahey had other faculties.

Prof. Keahey held the chair of political science at Butler university at the time of his resignation. He had been connected with Butler for two years, ever since he left the University of Wisconsin.

"One board member has said that the university will never again hire a professor from the University of Wisconsin, because of that school's berrallism," Prof. Keahey is quoted as saying.

Your Birthday

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU "CANCER."

If June 22nd is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 a. m. to 10 a. m., from 2 p. m. to 4 p. m. and from 5:50 p. m. to 7 p. m. The danger hours are from 6 a. m. to 10 a. m. and from 10 p. m. to midnight.

The astrological influences in force on June 22nd are of a stimulating nature, and a day of intense activity is predicted—failures will be in the minority. Those who have psychic faculties of any degree will meet with curious experiences. Lucky time for social interests.

The child born on this June 22nd will possess an ordinary personality, but will have many sterling qualities, which will assure it of more than average success during its adulthood. It will have an affectionate and a loyal nature, and will cling to its home ties. It will be a conscientious worker.

Born on June 22nd, you are an unobtrusive type of individual, and you seem to lack any outstanding personal characteristics. In spite of the negative impressions which you create, you are in possession of genuine ability and a great deal of efficiency. Never trusting, you are always on hand when needed. You always "make good" if placed in a position of responsibility, because you combine intelligence with conscientiousness and honesty, and firmly it your shoulder to the wheel. You believe in showing people what you can do, rather than boasting your time in idle boasts.

The affectional part of your nature is too deeply hidden behind a screen of indifference to deserve to be seen by the average individual, but those who are near or dear to you, appreciate the warmth of your heart, and the sincerity of your love. You never flatter people, and a compliment given by you is worth receiving. You are an inveterate and an intelligent reader, and you have a splendid memory. You try to keep abreast with the general news of the world, and your views are not narrow or prejudiced.

The horoscopical picture of your home life is not too bright. Perfect harmony will not exist between you and the man or woman you may marry, until you learn how to truly "give and take." You will be an unselfish parent.

The astrological signs for June 23rd indicate a successful time for those pursuing work of a mental type. Those holding definite ambitions will receive new indications that their dreams have not been in vain. Fate will seem to favor elderly people more than a young.

The stellar portents under which a child is born on this date are very favorable. The character tendencies should be as follows: a strong will, at times shading into pure stubbornness; an inquisitive nature; a love of pleasure; considerable affection; superiority complex; and "die hard" spirit.

Born on June 23rd, you possess large number of qualities which could bring you both success and happiness. Be you a man or

EXPERT EXPLAINS PURPOSE OF ITEM TERMED "SURPLUS"

Points Out That Term Is Used to Make Balance Sheet Jibe

BY GEORGE T. HUGHES (Copyright 1931 by Cons. Press) New York — There is an old story in newspaper offices about the day the financial editor was sick and the sporting editor substituted for him. There was an annual report of a great corporation to be reviewed and the man who ordinarily "covered" prize fights summarized the facts about the financial condition of the company concerned and concluded with the observation that it was a curious fact that the sum total of the assets in the balance sheet was exactly the same as the total of the liabilities.

Strange to say, there are people with a smattering of knowledge of financial affairs who have as quaint ideas about surpluses as the sporting editor did about balance sheets. They say that there is no reason why this or that industrial organization should not continue to pay dividends indefinitely regardless of the business situation. "Have they not an enormous surplus?" they ask, and "what is the surplus for?"

Well, the surplus is the difference between the sum total of the assets and that of the liabilities. It is the amount that makes the balance sheet come out even and gives it its name. Now, some corporations have extremely conservative accounting systems and they appraise the value of their plants at a very modest sum. Suppose the allowance for these plants should be written up to something approximating their real value, increasing that item on the asset side. Then, all other items on both sides of the balance sheet remaining the same, the surplus would be increased by exactly the amount of the addition to the plant item, and yet the ability to pay dividends would not be altered by a single cent.

Or take the matter of working capital, which looks as if it might give a better clue to this dividend paying ability. Working capital is the difference between the total of current assets and the total of current liabilities. It is the difference between what a corporation must pay on short notice and the sources from which it may obtain the funds for such payment. Dividend declarations come out of this difference. But under current assets are such items and inventories and bills receivable. These are not immediately available of disbursements to stockholders. The inventories must be turned into cash and in times of falling prices they may have to be realized on at a loss. Similarly, the bills receivable may not all be collectable although it is the custom to set up a reserve for that purpose. The only source from which the dividends can come is the cash items including monies in the bank and immediate marketable securities and out of these must be paid all other bills before the stockholders receive anything. A corporation may have an imposing surplus and yet be in no position to pay a dividend.

REFERENDUMS

When proponents of a bill at Madison cannot gain a majority of the legislature in its favor they are falling into the habit of asking that it be submitted to a vote of the people. The surprising ease with which other members of the legislature who oppose the bill and whose duty is therefore to defeat it, are willing, nevertheless, to put it to a referendum, indicates that a deeper consideration better be had concerning our form of government and the relation of referendums to it.

This is a representative form of government. That statement cannot be repeated too often. Because of its gigantic size and great population it could not hope to be operated successfully otherwise.

We have lately amended the constitution creating a situation so that legislators are receiving a decent salary and for that we must expect a constant willingness to shoulder every responsibility that goes with their position.

There is a time for referendums. Indeed, there are questions upon which the people may be said to have the inherent right to record a direct vote.

But referendums must be severely limited to questions that, because of their distinct and transparent importance, or their far-reaching effect upon the daily lives and obligations of all, instinctively strike the people as demanding a direct vote.

Questions referring to the everyday business of the government do not justify a referendum.

Questions like that submitted last April of whether the people want licenses issued from the county seat or the state capital have no business in a referendum.

A question like that proposed recently at Madison of putting the right to Sunday amusements to a vote of the people has no proper place in a referendum and would never be proposed in a legislature that was not covering in fear of a noisy, grim and active minority.

It therefore becomes the duty of legislators to study questions carefully and from every angle and determine what in their judgment is the best policy for the state to follow.

It is not their duty to become weary of their many labors, arduous though they are, and pass those questions along to the people.

It is not only because we will get much better government by means of a close study of each question by a selected few who are directly responsible to the people, but a constant submission of a variety of questions, instead of reserving referendums for matters of the utmost importance, will develop a laxity, a confusion and a mixup in our laws that will make for a hopeless jumble and derangement instead of a plain and consistent system.

Some of the matters recently submitted and some now proposed for future submission amount to nothing short of legislative pettifoggery.

The people do not care for shy and timid legislators. On the contrary the legislator who faces questions frankly, investigates fully, comes to a conclusion fairly and then stands by what he believes to be the right, will more often receive the support of the public, to say nothing of its admiration.

WHAT INTEREST WILL DO

The popular mayor of Boston, James Michael Curley, has insured his life for $100,000 with the provision that upon his death his children will share its income during their lives and thereafter the fund shall be invested at 5 per cent for two centuries, and its income then shall be turned over for the relief of unemployed persons.

The most interesting thing about this gift is what will happen to $100,000, with its income reinvested, in two centuries, for it has been figured out that at that time it will amount to $45,548,527 and the income upon it for distribution over $2,000,000 a year.

The example calls to mind the fact of the sale of an island upon part of which the city of New York is built, for which the Indians received $25 some three centuries ago, and the enormous difference in value today which is pointed out as an indication of how the Indians were given the worst of the bargain.

Yet the lowly $25 of three centuries ago invested at 6 per cent with its income reinvested would amount today to about $4,000,000,000, and had the Indians so invested it they might laugh up their sleeves at all the tall towers that now stand upon their former property.

COMMISSIONER OF INSURANCE

Harry J. Mortensen, long familiar with state affairs by three terms of service in the legislature, a lawyer by education and a banker by experience, has been appointed commissioner of insurance to succeed M. J. Freedy, brother-in-law of ex-Governor Zimmerman who appointed him to office.

The commissioner of insurance occupies a position of considerable importance in the state. To him every foreign insurance company must apply for permission to transact business in Wisconsin, and his is the responsibility of ascertaining that the affairs of every insurance company doing business in this state, domestic as well as foreign, are in a sound condition so that the people, in case of loss, may be promptly reimbursed.

Although at one time fire insurance accounted for a great share of the indemnity contracts in the state, other forms of insurance, and particularly liability and other classes of automobile insurance, have crept up with amazing speed. With this new situation the position of insurance commissioner becomes increasingly useful and important.

Wherever it is possible a standard form of insurance should be put into effect, that is a form in which the law provides the exact provisions that may go into the policy. We have such a form as respects fire insurance but the tendency must be checked to permit exceptions to it. It is only through a fair study and careful writing of the law that people are saved from the vicious depredations of wildcat companies like those that covered the state in the accident and sickness insurance fields some twenty-five years ago, selling sickness insurance policies that contained, in fine print, so many exceptions that there was little chance to recover anything for an ailment, and accident policies so surrounded by ifs and ands that they amounted to nothing more than palpable frauds; and with the result that when a person came to court to collect he found that he was exactly like the insect in the smooth Chinese adage which mentions the curious fact that a "grass-hopper always gets the worst of an argument with a chicken."

Mr. Mortensen has a fine opportunity to perform a distinct public service and, particularly in advising and guiding the people and the legislature in relation to the obvious reappraisal of his department that conditions demand, as well as the formulation of plans to meet changing situations. In a broad way the department must prevent a recurrence of vices that have developed, protect fair companies from fraud and exploitation and compel companies otherwise inclined to promptly and fairly meet losses or leave the state.

Opinions Of Others

HIPPODROME JUSTICE
For a long time it has been noticeable that the Courtrooms of America are far too small. They can't accommodate half the citizens who are eager to participate over the gruesome or the risqué details of sensational trials. In some cases it has been necessary to move the Court to larger quarters, auditoriums and the like, in order to permit a larger "house." Some of the more raucous celebrities easily would fill huge stadiums with the curious, and no doubt in time the amplifier will be as common a piece of Court furniture as the gavel or the defendant.

The expected, of course, is about to happen. Numbers of Judges and attorneys long have toyed with the idea of broadcasting trial proceedings. This may be done for the first time in the case of Hymie Martin, accused of murder. Judge, Prosecutor and defense counsel have registered no objections to the plan; therefore, it is possible that shortly we shall see or hear the administration of justice, involving the life of a man, reduced to the common level of crooning and old-time fiddling.

The trend toward justice as a free theatrical amusement has been going on relentlessly, thoughtful people worry about the dignity of the law and of the Courts. Some solemnly submit that dressing the Court, and perhaps even the counsel, in the traditional black robes, would bring added dignity. It would be dignity only in appearance. So long as Judges exist who are willing to make hippodrome spectacles of their kind of justice will receive the respect that is due a hippodrome, and their kind of justice will continue to infect the public's regard for all courts.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

I did not argue with the man.
It seemed a waste of words.
He gave to chance the wondrous plan
That gave sweet song to birds.

He gave to force the wisdom wise
That shaped the honey bee
And made the useful butterfly
So beautiful to see.

And as we walked 'neath splendid trees
Which cast a friendly shade,
He said: "Such miracles as these
By accident were made."

Too well I know what accident
And chance and force disclose
That chance blind fury could invent

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

REAL SPECIALISTS AND BRASS ONES

From the letters I infer that I have no use for specialists. That is not so. The trouble is that you and I have different conceptions of the meaning of specialism. I have little or no use for your kind of specialist.

Let's not get to calling each other unpleasant names over this. Let's see if we can't reach an understanding. I find that a layman, though terribly dumb and often quite obstinate in his notions about matters of health, physiology, hygiene and medicine, now and then can see reason if somebody will only take the trouble to explain things to him. I know I myself haven't enough patience with the layman who comes with that air of knowing so much about these things. My impulse is always to utter some remark and let it go at that. But after all, sarcasm is wasted on a dumbbell. He just gets hurt or indignant, where a more intelligent victim would win, perhaps, but then he'd think it over and pretty soon he'd come back with a gun—something like the stage Englishman seeing the point of the alleged joke.

A real specialist is a physician who has not in several years at general practice, as a family practitioner, and finding himself especially interested and perhaps particularly successful in some special field, he manages to take, say, six months or a year off and returns to school for postgraduate instruction in that special field and then goes back, but not back to the mixer. He goes back home and sends his cards to all his medical colleagues—but never to the public—announcing that he is limiting his practice to whatever specialty he elects.

A real specialist does not treat whatever happens along. He treats only such cases as are properly within his limited province. He depends, not on the direct patronage of the public, but upon the confidence his medical colleagues have in his special ability—they refer their patients to him for his special examination or treatment or opinion or advice.

Brass specialists—your kind—would starve if they had to wait for physicians to refer cases to them, for their own colleagues know too well how incompetent and untrustworthy these short-cut "specialists" are. Brass specialists shrewdly appeal to popular credulity and to the ignorance of the masses who imagine that if a doctor calls himself a specialist he must be better than ordinary doctors. Brass specialists, in short, are the shame of modern medicine. Most of them are born specialists—that is they built upon the world from medical school, with no experience at all in private general practice. They are the pampered pets of society relations.

A real specialist does not pass the patient around to half a dozen other specialists. He makes his own examination, and if he needs further data he asks the family doctor for the information. This way not only is the patient's case handled more effectively in getting at the patient's trouble.

PLAYING WIND INSTRUMENTS

Five years ago it was noticed that when I talked steadily for a while or sang, the skin on both sides of my throat puffed out. I went to the hospital and found out it was blowing up by air and that there was no danger. I am 15 and want to know if it would be all right for me to play a wood-wind musical instrument. (J. S.)

Answer—Ordinarily there is no harm in the playing of wind instruments. You had better be guided by the advice of the doctor who examined you.

Please tell me what to do when the urine discolors the vessel with reddish sediment. (M. L. C.)

Answer—Well, don't turn in a fire alarm or sent for the ambulance. You might try eating more fresh fruit or fruit juices or fresh green vegetables or relishes.

How can you reconcile this article with your claim that nothing can go through the unbroken or normal skin? (Mrs. G. C.)

Answer—I see no need for a reconciliation. The article tells of some attempts to immunize children against the toxin-antitoxin or "in-oc" the skin instead of injecting it into the skin. Academic, my dear Watson, and kinda silly.

The Tynmites

By Hal Cochran

THREE men with paddles worked away to make the long flat boat stay out in the middle of the stream, where it was safe and sound. Big rocks stood out on either side to add some danger to the ride. They'd surely crush the wooden boat, if it should run aground.

The Tynmites felt very still. It really was a wondrous thrill to see the water swirling by and foaming bubbly white. It wasn't long till Scouty said, "I must admit I thought I'd dread this ride, but now I've changed my mind. I think it's quite all right."

Then Coppy said, perhaps in fun, "I thought that we would need a gun to shoot the rapids. I was wrong. We needed but a boat. When we first started out I was too bit frightened just because I didn't think, amid the rocks, the craft would stay afloat."

The trip, however, ended well. The Travel Man soon heard them yell, "We've back again. Gee, we had fun." And then they hopped ashore. (Wee Carpy said, "Right now I'd like to take a very thrilling hike up old Mount Fujiyama. I am sure a treat's in store.")

"All right, that's just what we will do and it will be a hard climb, too," replied the friendly Travel Man. And to the base they went. Said Coppy, looking way up high, "The top looks far. Oh me, oh my! I fear if we ever reach there our ambition will be spent."

But, they started, anyway. The Travel man soon paused to say, "Now, take it easy, youngsters. Climb real slow and be discreet. It's likely we will want to stop quite often as we reach the top. The cinders on the pathway are not easy on the feet."

(The Tynmites reach Tokio in the next story.)

HOOVER MOVE EXPECTED TO HELP EUROPE

Plan of Cooperation Will Save Germany from Collapse, Experts Think

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
(Copyright 1931 by Post Pub. Co.)
Washington —(CNA)— President Hoover has taken the most sensational step in American foreign policy since the European war.

To save Germany from collapse and Europe from social disorder, the president has announced his policy of silence and isolation with respect to European economic problems and war debts. The exact plan of cooperation between the United States and Europe probably will take some time to work out but the gesture of international help to rescue Germany from the brink of ruin has been taken by the United States.

It was not the pleas of the allies for a reduction in their tax burden or the threat of German disintegration, with all its dangers to world stability and American foreign trade, that prompted President Hoover to call the leaders of both political parties into conference here in the hope of formulating a program, non-partisan in character, which would give adequate support at the December session of congress.

There are several things which can be done but they all have the same objective—the relief of Germany.

Several Lines of Action

First, Germany can declare a moratorium on payments to the allies, who in turn can suspend payments to the United States. Neither Germany nor the allies need ask the permission of the United States to take such a step. While it would have a profound effect on Germany's internal politics it probably would only postpone the crisis to some later day.

Second the United States alone or in cooperation with Great Britain and France could set up a two hundred million dollar loan to assist Germany in retaining her gold supply, which is fast ebbing away and threatening a currency crisis in central Europe. Such a loan could be arranged in the form of a credit with the assistance of the Federal Reserve bank thus pegging the gold situation in Germany. The move would enhance Germany's internal and external credit.

Third, an international conference with American participation to re-examine the whole debt question and scale down Germany's obligations.

Undoubtedly the conference inside Germany has developed to such a point that the Fascists are as dangerous to German stability as are the Communists and both sides are crushing the government of Chancellor Bruening so that if he is to keep Germany from falling into the hands of either extreme faction he must have help.

Needs People's Support

In other words he wants to be able to show the German people that by standing squarely behind him, relief can be obtained and that the overthrow of his government would only bring chaos.

Germany's debts to the allies are now of a conditional and unconditional. If a moratorium can be declared only on the conditional debts, so that the amounts suspended would equal the sums that have to be paid the allies to the United States, it would still leave Germany with an unconditional debt from which she could get no relief through a moratorium. Under the circumstances the opponents of the Bruening government are not going to be satisfied with a moratorium. It would appear therefore that, in addition, some kind of international plan to stabilize Germany's gold situation is absolutely essential.

But apart from the question of formula the biggest thing that has happened is the change in American foreign policy, which has come with such a suddenness that it can be accounted for only by the grave emergency threatening the European continent. There is also the fact that American economists have been insisting that the business situation in the United States cannot be better until assistance has been rendered by the United States to Europe.

No Special Session
Recognition of this fact by President Hoover has led to the summoning of the leaders of all political groups here with the idea that any strife may be put aside so that the president, without calling a special session of congress, can propose.

BELIEVE LACK OF WORK INCREASES USE OF LIBRARY

While this is ordinarily the slowest season of the year at the Appleton public library, a tremendous circulation is keeping the librarians busy every minute of the day. Miss Florence Day, librarian, is unable to account for the continued heavy use of the library, now that the schools are closed, but feels that part of it may be due to the unemployment situation which gives many persons extra time to spend in leisurely reading. Besides, many people seem to be spending their leisure time reading rather than on amusements which cost money.

With part of the staff vacationing, the staff is somewhat short-handed, making it impossible to carry on the usual summer work, such as re-cataloging, filing and inventory.

Need to take the necessary steps in international cooperation which may be dictated by the developments of the moment.

The largest obstacle to cooperation between the United States and Europe has been the fear of political entanglements in the internal affairs of other countries. The league of nations issue has been a residue in American politics, so that any treaty with European countries involving obligations on the part of the United States to protect Europe's peace would never be ratified. But economic cooperation is something else. It is susceptible to attack by the politicians, of course, but on the other hand none of them would take the risk of opposing a course of action that looked toward improvement of the business situation in the United States through the help extended abroad.

Could Charge Delay
Mr. Hoover could if he liked charge his opponents with delaying the economic recovery of the United States should any obstructive tactics be pursued by politicians.

Such assurances as the president is getting from political leaders here are of the most general character and relate solely to the present emergency in Europe. Unquestionably he has been strengthened in his determination to go ahead by a feeling that what the leaders of the opposite party and his own party have told him insures a united public opinion.

The country will not know for some time exactly how effective the proposed measures will be but the crisis calls for action of some kind and a brief statement from the White House to the effect that measures were being considered "to strengthen the German situation" would be a far-reaching proportion.

It will hearten Europe in a moment of great distress and cannot but help to promote friendliness toward the United States, thus tending to softening the antagonistic spirit that has developed with respect to American products and American tariff.

If the United States here to help Europe with loans, the investors of America must be able to see a world of friendliness instead of hostility, a world in which goods will be in-

STATE IS THIRD IN ROAD BUILDING

$6,188,522 Is Distributed in Contracts During May

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau
Washington — Wisconsin ranked third among the states in the amount of contracts for road building let during May with $6,188,522 distributed in contracts during the month, the American Association of State Highway Officials Friday reported to the president's emergency committee for employment.

This sum will be spent in building 459 miles of roads, giving employment to 7,225 persons.

Reports from 35 states indicated that more than a quarter of a million persons throughout the country were employed on state and federal aid road construction in May and that this number is still increasing as the work gains headway. The May contracts allow for $64,193,380 spent in building 5,128 miles of roads in the 35 states.

Minnesota with $13,337,925 in contracts let during May led for the month and New York with contracts totaling $7,167,330 ranked second, with Wisconsin third.

trenched on a mutually satisfactory basis meaning gradual absorption by American factories of the vast army of unemployed.

What President Hoover has said in effect is that the world has become a single economic unit and that the financial and economic resources of the United States which were mobilized in 1917 to save democracy from autocratic groups may be marshalled once more to preserve the German democracy from the autocratic and destructive policies of Fascism or Communism.

or they can be grown in rows in the cutting garden or vegetable garden as a succession crop and furnish beautiful cutting material. The seed should be sown where the plants are to remain and they should then be thinned to stand six inches apart at the least. A foot would be better if there is ample space. However, in the cutting garden the main terminal spike is the most desirable material so they can be planted six inches apart and yield a fine supply of bloom.

The Shirley poppies have come to be the handiest and most valuable all around annual in the garden. When anything else fails you can always scatter a pinch of poppy seed and you will have brilliant bloom before many weeks go by. These poppies in their delicate pinks and salmons as well as their brilliant red can furnish a whole garden with color and often are so used as the transition material between the early bulbs such as tulips and daffodils and the iris display to give color until the phloxes and perennial asters and main crop of late annuals such as zinnias and asters get into their stride. Keep a supply of Shirley poppy seed on hand to seed any vacancy where some plant has failed to do its duty.

54 CASES OF DISEASE REPORTED IN MONTH

Dr. Sanders released 37 homes, and assisted in making two cultures. He investigated 34 complaints, inspected eight dairies, two creameries, one ice cream plant and three baker wagons, and tested 55 samples of milk and cream. He secured two samples of well water.

Dr. Doherty issued 65 birth, 34 death, 15 marriage and 50 burial permits. During the month he made 10 visits investigating contagious diseases, 260 phone calls, and 187 visits.

Official Washington Leaving On Vacations

BY DOROTHEA J. LEWIS (Post-Crescent's Washington Society Editor)

Beginning with the arrival of travelers in the morning, the station, every Washington "eight" is part of an epidemic of "ohs" and "ahs."

A group of about 116 visitors from Wisconsin arrived in the national capital Sunday evening and crowded much excitement into two days. More than half of these visitors were from La Crosse while other cities represented were Green Bay, Olin, Hilbert, Elkhardt Lake, Rice Lake and Plymouth. Among those from Green Bay were Miss Ann McKeough, Miss Marie Van Vechel, Miss Alvina Libal and Miss Blanche Suchon.

Before they left Tuesday at four in the afternoon, these 116 Badgers had seen the capital, the congressional library, the various museums and legations, the new and still unfinished cathedral, the Lincoln Memorial, bureau of printing and engraving, Washington's Monument, the zoo, Rock Creek park with its eight miles of woodland and Mount Vernon, which seemed to be a prime favorite.

In the ancient little wharf, an old bell rings as boats pass, or stop. Inside Mount Vernon there are countless treasures of furniture, pictures and legends and the library with Washington's volumes of quaintly titled agricultural books is most interesting of all.

The Wisconsin visitors stopped at Gettysburg, Md. Sunday on their way to Washington and trooped about over the famous battle-field, seeing Devil's Cavern and other landmarks.

Miss Rachel Davies, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies, formerly of Madison, spent several days last week in Bronxville visiting her sister, Mrs. Thomas Fattion Chesborough, Jr.

Dr. and Mrs. William F. Notz, formerly of Watertown, were guests at a luncheon for royalty last Sunday. Father Coleman Nevils, president of Georgetown University, entertained in honor of Prince and Princess Siam, father and mother of the Queen of Siam. When they first visited Washington with their daughter and son-in-law, they were completely surrounded by ceremonies and etiquette. Now they have come back to have a good time.

Mrs. Burgess Seamonson of Chicago, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. D. O. Kinsman, formerly of Appleton, left Washington Saturday after a few weeks' visit with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Stannard Baker, both graduates of the University of Wisconsin, are now in Europe traveling in an entirely new way. Proving that there are new things under the sun and unusual ways of having a glorious vacation, they sailed, not so long ago, taking their canoe with them. They expect to be gone about six months and hope to paddle about on famous and obscure, near and far waterways of Europe.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Baker was Miss Frances Warren. The Bakers make their home in Chicago now.

Col. and Mrs. P. M. Anderson, formerly of Madison and Augusta, Wis., left Washington for their summer home at Chesapeake Bay Saturday. They will spend most of the summer there, coming by "to town" as infrequently as possible.

Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, sister-in-law of the Chief of Staff from Wisconsin, General Douglas MacArthur, entertained at a large dinner dance last night. Her guests included her daughter, Miss Mary Elizabeth MacArthur, and a classmate, Miss Louise Burt.

Dancing after dinner was held out in the garden with gay lanterns to light the scene.

Pick Staff For Girls' Lake Camp

THE staff of counselors and camp directors for Camp O'Leary, Girl Scouts camp at Chain O'Lakes, Waupaca, has been selected and the entire registration for the two weeks has been filled, according to Dorothy Calnin, director. The girls will leave Thursday morning to be gone for two weeks. All of the campers were given physical examinations last Friday at the Woman's club.

Miss Calnin is director of the camp, and Mrs. Mabel Shannon is camp and assistant director. Arthur Jensen will be the life guard and Miss Helen Gilman will act as swimming counselor.

Counselors for specific activities include Miss Viola Bush, nature work; Miss Claire Hahn, athletics; Miss Margaret Beckle, dramatics; Miss Joan Shannon, and Miss Nora Conney, newspaper and assistant dramatics and swimming; Miss Marion Weigler, canteen and library; Miss Katherine Dietzler and Mrs. Walter Hansen, Scout work. Junior counselors are the Misses Wilhelm, Harris, Helen Dengel, Elizabeth Shannon, Yvonne Catlin, Wilhelmina Meyer, and Helen McGrath. Eight of the counselors are senior life savers and examiners of the Red Cross.

The camp is sponsored by the Girl Scout community committee, which is affiliated with the Woman's club. It is, however, open to girls other than Scout members.

The junior counselors will meet at 7:15 Monday night at the Woman's club.

Help Child Curb Smart Wise Cracks

BY ANGELO PATRI

"Old Mother Klearly told me to get off her grass this noon," said Baxter, between mouthfuls at dinner.

"I'll bet you had your answer ready," said father proudly.

"I sure did. I said to her, 'You're the only goose I see here so maybe you do need all the grass for yourself. That fetched her. Old Goose. That's what we call her now when we pass her house.'"

"That's right, Sonny. Hold your own. Nobody else'll do it."

"I don't think that Baxter should talk back that way," said grandmother gently. "Old Mrs. Klearly takes great pride in that bit of grass and it hurts her feelings to have a child talk back like that."

"Old Mother Klearly. Who's she? Nobody cares for her."

"Better have a dog's goodwill than his bite, you know," said Grandmother. "Baxter won't have many friends if his tongue runs away with him."

Children are quick enough with their tongues without our helping them. They need to be taught control rather than freedom there. In the first place other people are entitled to respect because they are old. Life means something when one has spent fifty or sixty years at it. A word let loose is loose forever and it is impossible how long a hard word lasts and works its mischief.

Smart saying are not half as smart as their creator thinks they are. They are rather cheap compared to the words of courtesy that might have taken their place. A pleasant word is a word that far more intelligence, far more control, far more breeding, than the small retort.

Nowadays children are beginning to think that a "wise-crack" makes them appear smart. Most of their sayings are copied from the cheap talkies. High grade performers do not use them. The children store the phrases that bring laughs and use them when a good opportunity offers. They lose their original flavor when lifted from their peculiar setting and the result is anything but good. Still the children, encouraged by the talkies, are using them triumphantly.

The only thing to do is to start an opposing idea. Instead of praising the smart, sharp word, praise the retort courteous. Gather all the polite words, the neat replies, the fitting answers, that you can find and present them to the children as worthy their use. Of course you will have to like the courteous words yourself or the children will never use them. They use what you admire.

In any case the sharp retort is not to be favored. I have never known anybody that was very sorry for something he did not say, but I know many who are very sorry for something they have said. When you cannot speak gently, with courtesy, keep still. Silence always has its dignity.

The Shop Window

By PEGGY POST

THERE'S never a doubt about PETTINGER'S springing new ideas. They are checkered with cleverness and full of ideas too. For instance Culver, the new manure, comes with a bottle of nail liquid and a nail bath. After pouring the liquid into the bath you poke your finger tip through the rubber aperture and dress the bathed finger while you're preparing the next in the bath. Found the delightful new deodorant called Fresh here and new sizes of Zip either in cake or cream form.

However, the neatest innovation is the little white cork and gold tipped cigarettes that turn out to be tre-jur lip sticks. They match the new white enameled compacts and are terribly clever with a little monogram.

KANOUSE'S had an eye for cleverness as well as smartness when they stepped forth with new cotton blouses with adorable short sleeves. Peasant blouse in white with colorful embroidery is very attractive with its brief sleeve caught with smocking. Pastel printed ones have little sleeves that step into a puff effect. The prices range from 95c to $2.50 with a complete collection of sizes. For the most part the blouses are either batiste or voile. Rather nice to wear with a skirt on a day when a suit jacket is unbearable.

YOU'LL find SCHLINTZ one life saving station on an avenue where your vacation friend will heat wave. Like an oasis the Schlintz fountain beckons to thirsty walkers, but there is no mirage about the place. There cool minted milk, lime freezers, lemonades and orangeades are exactly what they are cracked up to be. The fruit used in all of these drinks is fresh and of excellent quality. Then let me make you aware that they are now in a big house. One handy one cooks your picnic food and keeps it piping hot until you are ready to eat it. The point here is that you can prepare the food at home. Any of these may be purchased on your monthly light bill if you'd prefer.

EVEN the heat of a summer-time does not make the CANDLE GLOW TEA ROOM less attractive. It is very cozy and cool here with the cheerful draperies fluttering at the many windows. You'll find cool drinks and hot weather foods on the menu planned to startle jaded appetites with their attractiveness. This tea room is a place for relaxation and for a grand chance to enjoy one's dinner.

THEN don't forget that your camera must be tucked into your bag for any trip at all with fresh kodak films at the IDEAL PHOTO AND GIFT SHOP. This place is headquarters for films, kodaks, developing and such. Then too, it's crammed full of clever gift ideas with attention to travel suggestions in case some of your friends plan a grand long journey. Smart little card party has colorful tallies, each of a different country, with the score pad an exciting ship just leaving the quay. Terribly attractive.

THE PANAMAS still have the season clinched for popularity and a hit hats form the main quest on every table at the YOGUE HAT SHOP. Vacationers for the glorious fourth who are looking forward to a smart trip to a Panama better make a rush for this shop before the stock runs out again. Every sort of shape imaginable is included on the Panama list, some have wide, flattering brims others droop but slightly. Interesting to note that many of the newer panamas have colorful pipings with a few done in navy or black patent leather.

On days as hot as these last few nary a thought enters my head except a wish to find comfort or a soothing nook beside a sibilant sea. But then, even a vacation needs its appearances.

NEVER in all my shopping days have I seen such a collection of adorable handkerchiefs as are in the TREASURE BOX GIFT SHOP. They are darling and no mistake. Actually, I quilted some of them, perhaps a green sailboat with a blue corner of a white hanky. The all white that are exquisitely hand hemstitched in applique are perfect beauties! Not at all expensive and stunning. While tiny dot borders characterize one kind, larger sport ones are in pastel. The kiddies sizes are cunning!

DISCOVERED another straight-from-the-shoulder suggestion relegated to me by a most useful trip through the WISCONSIN CLOTHING CO. POW-ER CO. Found that it's no longer necessary and altogether absurd for women folk to go off to the family summer home or cottage and spend her vacation patiently bemoaning over a tiring hot stove! You'll find the sturdy cooler that is a veritable no hesitation about its cooking, and no dirtiness about its cooking. Rather tricky affair with separate compartments in which an entire dinner may be cooked in one gesture. And this means a dinner with meat and potato, vegetable and pudding, just for instance! The plate, when the compartments are removed, may be used for heating, frying or cooking coffee.

Loads of electric contraptions here that puts joy into apartment living, picnicking, and just for snacking and vacation. They are in a big house. One handy one cooks your picnic food and keeps it piping hot until you are ready to eat it. The point here is that you can prepare the food at home. Any of these may be purchased on your monthly light bill if you'd prefer.

THESE simply is nothing smarter than off-white, that devastating new color that is neither grey nor white. Tucked through G E N E N S will show you the gorgeousness of the color. They have it in new Phoenix dul-sheer velvets, beautiful stockings that look like warm ivory when you have them on with pastel shoes. White is being worn entirely in place of white and it is ever so much prettier because it has a softened effect. By the way it is perfect with light linen shoes.

Found it in jewelry, this chic carotte that is so beautifully colored and lightweight. It looks almost white until you put the glare of dead white next to it. Fell for the pigskin bags in off-white. They are the best looking things I've seen anywhere with black trimmings and light tan combinations.

AT LAST I have sat in a Chesterfield and knew I was doing it. Found said Chesterfield at DIDERICH'S and realized that it is what is commonly known as a davenport. Beautiful thing in a gorgeous heather cloth that is predominantly blue mixed with yellow and white. Tucked back and wide sturdy arms. It is quite easy to imagine this piece of furniture in a favorite room because it is such a beauty. It could be a happy vacation at home if you could rest your weary (or lazy) bones on this.

A TRIP into GENIESSE'S is the best tonic possible to an anemic summer wardrobe, especially if you're planning a trip where white is the leading color for nearly everything. Love the manner in which white washables take to gay coats. One of these outfits, a white coat, a Panama and your vacation! White is absolutely made! One prize winner in white rajah has a delightful red coat, cut away in front and fastened with a big white button. It also has an ascot tie appliqued in white.

THE HOBBY HOUSE has a collection of beautiful lamps that are worth more than a glance! Lovely things for almost any occasion. One particularly nice one is a bridge size with a New England oil lamp effect covered with a subdued checkered shade. This is done in a pewter finish. Another love of a lamp is a small table affair all of hobnail glass. A woe lamp for a wee lass or lady elegantly with a long line of red elephants. You know, of course, that separate shades are in this shop, too.

ONE GOOD point scored by ELLYN in her beauty shop above Voigt's is that she has a cream for sunburn that can be applied before getting chummy with radiant scorching sunbeams and its not white. It is a handi-cap! Doesn't hinder the golden tan creeping around your shoulders one bit, which is a subtle way of giving three cheers for ELLYN's. It's really a good idea to stock up with creams before you leave in order to have a lovely skin through the trip. Recommend this Margueta cream for cleansing, acne, bleaching, or whatever other you need.

LET ME tip you off to summer coolness. HERBERT'S HOSIERY SHOP has a right smart selection of enchanting cotton socks for hot summer days. The voices are precious in their pastel colorings and in their tendency to fit the "figger". They all tub beautifully with the most every bit as lovely as when first worn. These are awfully inexpensive. The linens and shantungs here are very nice, many of the latter having little printed jackets. An especially attractive voile is in cool green with little white flowers in the print. Only $1.95, too.

The Story of Sue

MARGERY HALE
© 1929 by NEA Service, Inc.

SUE went to the train with Sarah. She helped the porter take change of her bags; watched Sarah get her ticket and a last-minute reservation. Not many people were traveling, so it wasn't hard. Then suddenly Sue was waving at the slender figure in brown, as Sarah's pliant, rather audacious, rather wistful face smiled from the window.

Sarah was looking very lovely, Sue mused, as she started home. There was something very youthful, yet very sophisticated, about the soft brown woolen suit and the snowy chiffon blouse that spilled big brown polka dots in a dozen ruffles that made a collar. The brown and white slippers had cost money. The white pocketbook with its brown leather tips and the white close-fitting hat and gloves weren't bought at a bargain counter, either, Sue knew. Sarah had spent her money rather lavishly.

"I've decided that if I'm going to be successful you must look successful," Sarah had said. "I'm going after something big this time, Sue. Not cottages with checkered gingham curtains and red roses by the door. I'm aiming higher. There isn't any higher aim. You're short at nothing," Sue had corrected her.

"That's just because you happened to want the simple life with a certain handsome young man and you're getting it. If you weren't you might think that orchids could banish . . . violets."

And now Sarah was gone.

Sue saw the lights in the Metcalf home as she reached home. Grace and Jimmy were still there. But they were leaving in a day or two as Jimmy had an out-of-town assignment for his firm. They would be back again in a month, would rent an apartment, and settle down with their English prints on the wall, the Italian pottery pecking its blue and orange faces out of odd corners, and the lemon-colored cups and saucers from Venice waiting for guests to come to tea, Grace had explained.

Sue had a sudden sense of loneliness as she went up the walk. She didn't want to be left alone. She wanted Jack. She wanted to feel his arms around her again, his lips pressed against hers, his voice saying the things that she had once feared he would never say. She remembered the night that he had gone to Florida, and she had waited so long for him to call and he hadn't. She had come far since that night. Life had gone down some crooked streets but eventually it had worked its way around to a smooth highway that stretched ahead with nothing to break it at all.

There was a new moon in the sky, a thin white one that was as perishable as a chiffon veil or a crystal bowl. Sue looked at it and made a wish. And the wish followed another train that was speeding along somewhere in the night. East, west, north or south. Sue didn't know.

She sat down by the window and watched the night for a little while. She threw the dark tumbled curls away from her face and crossed her slender white arms on the window sill. She was suddenly glad that she was young and slim and vibrant; that there were so many years of life before her. Life with Jack. Without him. . . But she wouldn't think of that. She didn't have to. If he should die . . . Trains were always being wrecked . . . But he wouldn't.

She heard Ted coming in. And she thought of Sarah, whose train followed the silver rails of another track.

"Tomorrow," she told herself, suddenly sensible, "tomorrow I have to find a job! I have twenty-four cents to my name, and I need some new clothes."

NEXT: Sue gets a job.

RECIPE GIVES COFFEE ROASTER IDEA FOR PERFECTING FLAVOR

Applies Rule for Mixing Muffin Ingredients to Patented Roasting Process

Success in muffin making depends to a great extent on the care with which the batter is made. That is why most recipes state that the milk should be poured into the flour a little at a time rather than all at once. Such care prevents lumps from forming.

This rule, "a little at a time," is the basis of Controlled Roasting—a process patented and used only by Hills Bros. in roasting their coffee. By automatic control, coffee passes continuously through the roasters, a few pounds at a time. Accurately controlled heat is applied with the result that every degree that insures a rich, uniform, full-bodied flavor. The common method of roasting coffee is in bulk—just the opposite of Hills Bros. process.

Hills Bros. Coffee is always fresh because it is packed in a can. By his process air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is taken out of the can and kept out. Ordinary cans, even if air-tight, do not keep coffee fresh. Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can. Hills Bros. Coffee, Inc., Chicago, Illinois.

New Neckline

BY ANNEBELLE WORTHINGTON

Never were informal evening and formal afternoon frocks so versatile as this season.

And today's model is a beauty. Don't you love the neckline? It's so different, smart and generally becoming. A youthful sash belts the waistline, and gives prominence to the moulded bodice and hips. The deep pointed seaming of the circular skirt tends further to give the figure charming height.

This model is enchantingly lovely in a chiffon print, cobwebby lace, shadow patterned organdie, eyelid batiste, pastel or white crepe silk and cotton net.

Style No. 3119 may be had in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100.

EYE EXERCISE MAY RESTORE BLURRED VISION

Blurred vision doesn't mean you need glasses, necessarily. Sometimes it is your liver. Sometimes it is fatigue. Sometimes it is because you have been looking intently at too many things too long.

Exercises for the eyes, plus plenty of rest between exercises, can do wonders for your eyes. Some eye specialists teach certain daily doings for eyes that bring back wandering vision to an ability to focus.

Just exercising your eyes, without knowing why, is a dangerous thing to do. But certain exercises are good for them generally and can do only beneficial things to your vision. Here are some mild eye-exercises which will relax your eyes, if nothing else. They might actually help your focusing powers, if you did them regularly.

1. Sit still, relaxed, and fix your eyes on some small object, then switch to the electric light, the match box on the table, or some such small thing. Look at it steadily for long enough time to count five, then roll your eyes upward, without lifting your head, until you seem to be trying to look up through your forehead.

Hold that look while you breathe naturally; do not count five. Then bring your glance back down to the small object again. Do you see just one of it? Or do you see two? By doing this kind of exercise faithfully, several times a day, you probably will end by seeing just one, which means your vision is better.

Roll Your Own

2. Cast your eyes down, then slowly roll them out as if trying to look at your right ear, then straight across the front, then try to look at your left ear, then down again. This rotary motion is excellent for resting the eyes. Do it slowly about five times one way, reverse, roll them the other way, then palm your hands and try to "see black" a few seconds. I think you will find your eyes much rested.

Rolling your eyes always has been considered a coquettish act. This exercise proves that it is a good thing to keep a few such coquettish tricks right in your own bag.

WE WOMEN

By Virginia Vance

FICKLE WOMAN—HONESTY IN LOVE

Dear Virginia Vance: What's the matter with women anyway? And what's the matter with my girl in particular? Once she thought she loved me. I knew I loved her and I still do. But in the meantime she fell for someone else and gave me the ax. Then after a while, she suddenly called me up and begged me to come back to her, saying that there was no one else in the world for her. Now we have been happy for a few weeks, and she shows signs of worrying about the other fellow. He's going around with other girls and she's jealous. Can you hear this? Are women always fickle? Why should I be so steady and constant and sure of my life while she is so weak and vacillating? Should I tell her I'm through? She still says she THINKS she cares for me.

FRED.

Give Girl A Chance To Know Her Own Mind

You happen to be one of those steady sure people who fall in love in a methodical manner, and stay in love because you're quite sure of your emotions, you're not given to imaginative fears, your digestion's good, and your nerves are probably sound.

And the girl friend may be just the other type. Don't be too hard on her. We're not all built the same way. We can't all say definitely and clearly when we're in love, how we're in love, with whom we're in love—or whether we're in love at all. Lots of us fool around and make mistakes, get flustered and worry our heads off, before we arrive at any sort of conclusion at all.

Looks as if your girl friend didn't know her own mind. She thinks she cares for you. But she doesn't like the idea of being supplanted by anyone else in the other fellow's affections. She worries and frets while you remain calm and sure.

Well, if you love her enough and your patience can stand the test, go on waiting, and see how she makes up her mind.

That's the best thing you can do. You can't force her to a decision. It might be pretty hard on her if you practically threw her into the arms of the other man to whom she may not really be suited. Give her a chance, and in the meantime comfort yourself with the reflection that hundreds of other men have had to hang around patiently waiting for some erratic female to make up her mind whom she loved and why.

Renew Friendship Gradually

A. R. H.: The trouble is that the young man in question seems to be getting along quite well without you as the One and Only. While you've been finding out that after all you care for him more than for anyone else in the world—he has perhaps made a different sort of discovery. There is absolutely no harm in your seeking to renew the friendship with a friendly invitation to call but after that don't hope too much and don't show that you expect anything at all but friendship.

You more or less ended the affair some three years ago, and if the boy has common-sense he has done his best to forget you. In fact he may have arranged his life to exclude you—for that is the only possible course he could take, once you had chosen to give him up.

So you can't walk right back into his heart, without difficulty. If he has any feeling for you left, you must be very careful not to kill it with overbearingness, or too great a display of your affection. Start all over again with friendship, if you can, and let things arrange themselves.

If you are meant for each other, you'll manage somehow to overcome the long misunderstanding but the wonder can't be wrought overnight. (Copyright, 1931, by The Associated Newspapers)

A HOME You Build For Yourself is Your Safest Investment

One of the fundamental requirements of a sound investment is safety of principal. A home you build for yourself offers this necessary safety to a higher degree than any other type of security. Economic fluctuations scarce affect its value. And if built in a growing locality it is one of the few investments you will not have to sacrifice in an emergency. Year in and year out—through rents saved—it will continue to pay monthly dividends almost twice those of any other equally sound security.

MENASHA NINE TRIMMED 3 TO 0 BY RED GRANITE

Poor Fielding and Wild Tosses Spell "Shut Out" for Falcon Team

Menasha — Shabby fielding and wild throwing caused the Menasha Falcons to drop a 3 to 0 game to the Red Granite here Sunday afternoon.

Showing superior strength, both in offensive and defensive, the Red Granite crew encountered little difficulty in presenting the home team with powerful opposition. The visitors played errorless baseball, while the Falcons tallied seven errors.

To "Webby" Schultz, lanky hurler for the invading aggregation, goes the credit for the victory. His offerings were foolproof, as is evidenced by the fact that eight Menasha players were fanned and none were given the privilege of marching to the first bag on balls.

"Kony" Kenetzke, who took too much "Shavano" Zenefski's place on the mound, while the latter took a rest in right field, refused to be downed by superior pitching. He allowed the walk, he pitched errorless ball. He benched two players via the strike out method.

The fracas advanced seven tight innings before the Red Granite team managed to start the ball rolling by pounding out two hits with one error. A home run by John Schmidt, Menasha's shortstop, sent A. Griffith to first, and hits by D'Orazio and Wiske brought the Red Granite shortstop home for the initial counter of the game.

Score Two More

The final inning spelled defeat for the Falcons when a couple of wild throws and muffed flies gave the invaders three hits and two more runs.

Kitsa started the ball rolling in the final frame by slugging out a single over third base. R. Chipman then punted a hot line to center for a hit. Center scoring Kitsa. Another single by Jack Chipman scored R. Chipman. The latter Chipman was caught short trying to stretch his single into a double.

The Falcons threatened to even the count in the eighth when they scored a run on a single by Kitsa. Kitsa punted out long hits, but the former spoiled the chance when he attempted to gain third on a double by Kryslak. He tried to slide, but was tagged as he skidded across a pool of sticky mud. Smith flied out in deep center to close the eighth inning for the home team.

The ninth inning also looked promising for the Falcons when Sholeski punted out a long single, but the game was over when Lewandowski hit into a double play.

Konetzke found himself in a tight hole in the sixth frame when an error by one of his fielders put runners on all three bases with none out, but a double play from home plate to second base saved the day.

Misses Third Bag

Red Granite threatened to score again in the sixth frame when A. Griffith ruined the chance when he attempted to get home from second on Wiske's single, which was muffed by Smith at shortstop. Griffith failed to touch third in rounding the base, and was declared out when he reached the home plate.

The injured player was given medical attention on the field and went back into the game.

Who's News Today

BY LEMUEL F. PARTON

New York, (AP) — In the 57 revolutions of the first century of the Venezuelan republic there was an unbroken rule about fighting on Tuesday. On this day, the armies knocked off, dealt aguadante and pulque to all hands and sang songs about "Las Estrellitas." In 1809, El Sr. Don Juan Vicente Gomez, leading a frowzy catch-as-catch-can army, decided, like Albert Einstein, to win by challenging an axiom. He fought on Tuesday, usurped the presidency of Castro, ill in Europe, and made himself dictator. Now at the age of 81, he is again proclaimed president of Venezuela, after his unanimous re-election.

In and out of office — although generally in — President Gomez rules at his hacienda, Las Delicias, at Maracay, separated from Trinidad by 500 miles of jungle, swamps and mountains.

In the boots and spurs of a vaquero, wearing faded khaki, with a riding crop for a cane, president Gomez holds open air court under a cacha tree. His ministers and the leading politicians of the realm assemble there, with a guitar strumming in the background, and get their orders.

At Maracay, General Gomez has built a magnificent tropical hotel in the world's most beautiful place of tiles, frescos, murals and painted colonnades. Two hundred tables are spread with linen, silver and jungle orchids for guests who never come. The splendid palace is empty. But General Gomez has a secret. The port of Maracay will soon be open and then, says the smiling and grizzled old patriarch, the guests will come.

General Gomez is the richest man in Venezuela.

The prohibition Portia, Mrs. Mahel Walker Willebrandt, doubling in the role of counsel for transmuted grape vines, wins a signal victory in the New York court ruling ordering the return of seized wine, made from the product of fruit. Industries, Inc., Mrs. Willebrandt's clients.

Mrs. Willebrandt, once assistant U. S. attorney general in charge of prohibition enforcement, is one of the most interesting of modern women careerists. Born in a one-room shack near Woodside, Kansas, and will reduce its hours of operation to 12, after six years in school she went to California, via Arizona, studied law and was assistant to the attorney general at 31.

Literati, sneering at Mrs. Willebrandt, are disillusioned if they ever met her. She can serve and return with any of them in a triumphant literary tournament. Her residence at Washington is a salon, marked by the utmost state and dignity in its appointments. She is comely and personable, and President Harding hesitated to appoint her because he thought she was a volage.

When the Bank of United States here crashed on Dec. 11 last, it was the most disastrous bank failure, in point of total deposits, in American history. The bank, founded by J. P. Morgan, president, found guilty of a growing out of the failure, was one of the youngest men ever to head a big city bank. At 37, he succeeded his father, the late John S. Marcus, as president. He is now 41. Graduating from Columbia university, he entered his father's bank. It was his first and last job, leading to a possible maximum jail term of seven years. At 28, he became vice-president of the bank and married Miss Lillian Phillips, daughter of a wealthy family.

When the Bank of United States here crashed on Dec. 11 last, it was the most disastrous bank failure, in point of total deposits, in American history. The bank, founded by J. P. Morgan, president, found guilty of a growing out of the failure, was one of the youngest men ever to head a big city bank. At 37, he succeeded his father, the late John S. Marcus, as president. He is now 41. Graduating from Columbia university, he entered his father's bank. It was his first and last job, leading to a possible maximum jail term of seven years. At 28, he became vice-president of the bank and married Miss Lillian Phillips, daughter of a wealthy family.

When it was learned, however, that the military still in Fening, key city of northern Fukien, the Communists have confiscated all property title deeds as the initial step toward setting up a Soviet government.

Refugees said northern Fukien is actually without official protection since officials and most civilians have fled to the coast for safety.

Meanwhile both the Nationalist and Canton governments fought for the support of General Chen Ming-Shu and his 7,000 soldiers. Officially the southern government considered him neutral, but there seemed little doubt, dispatches said, that the south would advance upon the city of which he once was governor—or—Canton.

Chen, when the southerners ousted him as governor, fled to Japan. He returned recently, joined his army in Kiangsi province. Since then he has been identified variously with the Chiang Kai-Shek regime or the Canton government. At other times he was described as planning to remain neutral.

Canton has ceased to pay him funds to retain his neutral status and his Canton headquarters were recently raided. Two thousand rifles and many machine guns were confiscated.

Growing Deaf With Head Noises? Try This

If you are growing hard of hearing, and fear catarrhal deafness, or if you have roaring, rumbling, hissing noises in your ears, go to Schlitz Bros. Co. or your druggist and get 1 oz. of Parmit (double strength) and add to it a pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to take. Anyone who is threatened with catarrhal deafness or who has head noises should give this prescription a trial. Adv.

NEW LONDON SOFTBALL TEAM TAKES TRIMMING

Special to Post-Crescent

New London—New London's soft ball team nearly allowed Faulk, Oshkosh twirler, to set a league record for trickouts Sunday morning at Oshkosh. Twenty of the home boys marched up to the place, swung three times and marched back again. The New London infield gave Oshkosh most of their 13 runs by giving the best exhibition of booting the ball indulged in this year. Homers, triples and two baggers off of Wells and Much. Home pitchers, fattened up the Oshkosh boys batting averages. Huntley and Ullrich batted 500 each. Huntley with two hits out of four times at bat and Ullrich with a hit and walk out of three times at bat. Much got the fourth New London hit, while Ullrich's walk was the only one allowed by the Oshkosh pitcher. The latter was the only New London man who did not strikeout during the game. Out of these four hits and a walk New London secured three runs.

NEW LONDON NINE WHIPS READFIELD

Turns in 11 to 7 Victory After 10 Innings of Heavy Hitting

Special to Post-Crescent

New London—A good old fashioned slugfest was indulged in by New London and Readfield in their Sunday afternoon base ball game on the latter's diamond. New London, off to a safe lead by pounding in five runs in one inning, saw Readfield come back and hammer over four runs in one inning. At the eighth the score was 7-5 when Westphal and his support wobbled and Readfield showed two runners across to tie the score. The game went an extra frame and was finished only after Readfield staged a desperate rally.

In the tenth after two men were on Donnan pinch batted for New London and drew a base on balls off of Wing to load the bases. Wing, hoped to force Westphal to hit into a double play. Pete spoiled Readfield's afternoon by socking a triple to clean the bases. Dobbstein's little roller toward first base allowed Westphal to score, making the score 11-7. Readfield after they loaded the bases in the tenth could do nothing with Westphal's pitching. Both Pete and Wing pitched good games but their team mates support was erratic.

GREER SPEAKS ON VISION AT CAMP MEETING

500 Persons Attend Opening Session of 8-day Methodist Assembly

(Special to Post-Crescent)
Forest Junction—Approximately 500 persons from various points in eastern Wisconsin attended the opening service of an eight-day assembly Sunday morning at the Methodist camp ground near Wolfmeier's corner three miles east of here on Highway 10. Following an informal gathering of delegates on Saturday evening, the service Sunday morning marked the opening of the sixth annual Francis Asbury Epworth league institute, with which is being combined a camp meeting said to have been held annually at the location for perhaps half a century.

Rev. George D. Greer, professor of psychology at Taylor university, Upland, Ind., delivered the opening sermon, speaking on visions. Vision, he said, which enables one to see things which do not presently exist in material things, is what distinguishes human being from animals. "The donkey of the twentieth century is still the same as the donkey of the first century, whereas human beings, because of vision, has progressed."

Proclaiming the absolute need of visions in spiritual realms as well as in temporal, the speaker ascribed the present day lack of spiritual power in the church to a substitution of activity for vision. Too many churches, he said, are active enough, but their members have never had a vision to provide the proper foundation for their activity. With these circumstances existing, the speaker lamented meditation as a lost art.

A choir from Zion Methodist Episcopal church at Green Bay, directed by their pastor, the Rev. T. C. Nagler, and a choir from the Brillion church, directed by A. C. Wolfmeyer, provided the special songs for the service.

The Rev. Mac Tavish from Waldo, for many years with the rescue mission at Milwaukee, addressed a mass meeting Sunday afternoon, substituting for F. W. Bucklin of West Bend, county judge of Washington Co., who was unable to appear. Preceding the evening service, addressed by Prof. Greer, the Epworth league from Sheboygan presented a play, "The Rock."

Institute classes opened Monday morning with 45 minutes being devoted to studies in home missions, and an hour each to classes in international relations and problems of youth. Prof. Greer is the instructor in the problem of youth. The class in international relations, a new feature this year, deals with problems between the races of the world. It is being taught by the Rev. Dan Stahmer of Sheboygan, who has just returned from a 12 day attendance at a school in Pennsylvania on this subject, sponsored by the Methodist and Quaker denominations. Miss Alma Huppert of Shawano, China, now on furlough at Watertown, is conducting the studies in home missions.

Registrations of students in the various courses had not yet been completed on Monday forenoon. Miss Alice Schmidt of Manitowoc is substituting as registrar in the absence of Miss Hattie Reichardt of New Holstein. The classes are scheduled to conclude Friday morning. Devotional services with inspirational addresses will continue over Sunday.

TUBERCULOSIS IS DANGEROUS AT 20

Find Disease Is More Dangerous Than Accidents in State Survey

Madison—When you enter your twenties in Wisconsin, your most dangerous enemy is tuberculosis instead of accidents, but both of these and eight other death causes will bear a heap of watching according to the bureau of vital statistics, state board of health.

The state's 20-to-24-year age group reduced its deaths from all causes from 778 in 1929 to 764 in 1930. Its tuberculosis toll of 191 marks a reduction of a single death from that of the previous year, but accidents claimed 174 of its lives in 1930 as compared with but 164 in 1929.

Heart diseases were in third place in point of deadliness to this age group, taking 53 lives as compared with 48 in the preceding year, the survey shows. Women of the group suffered 49 deaths from puerperal causes, six less than in 1929.

Pneumonia, appendicitis, suicide, nephritis, cancer, and influenza were next in importance to those in their early twenties, the 25 causes of suicide duplicating the 1929 item.

Hits and Errors

BY "MAC"

THE crowd was the largest we've seen at Brandt park in the last eight years. More than 900 tickets were sold at the gate and the kids, season tickets and passes showed the total to 1,100 or more.

Eddie Kotal blew in from Kimberly for the last couple innings of the game. He is playing with Green Bay and will cavort here next Sunday when the Fords and Bays clash. Kotal pulled hard for an Appleton win and was tickled when Shields hit his homer.

Marty Lamers and his gang probably figure "there ain't no justice." They lost an extra inning game last week to the Bays and this week to the Fords. Apparently Marty and the boys are not leading the right kind of lives.

Despite the fact the crowd was large and more or less partisan, it wasn't noisy. The crowd booed Les Smith when he kicked on decisions, booed Marty Lamers, applauded Behr and cheered Joe Shields. It called for a light, however, something that usually occurs at an Appleton-Kaukauna game.

Shields had a great afternoon. He was guilty of an error in the fifth, featured in a double play in the eighth after getting hand cuffed on a grounder and then smacked a homer to win the game.

Van Wyck's throw to the plate in the seventh to catch Frange was beautiful. The Kaw shortstop tangled with Leo Murphy at home plate but despite the fact Leo received a couple bruises, the Irishman held on to the ball. Frange later bumped Eggert at first on a play and came out only second best.

Ray Smith almost hit the proverbial 99 fouls when he batted in the seventh frame losing at least half a dozen balls outside the park. He finally fouled out to Shields.

Eggert was bat star for the Fords with three hits, out of five. Shields got two for four as did Weisberger. Les Smith got three for five for the Kaws and Collins two for four.

Tornow erred twice in the fourth, dropping a fielder's choice at second once and then bobbling a grounder later in the same frame. In the sixth he dashed almost to center to snare Wenzel's high fly.

Marty Lamers is getting old. He has showed himself to seventh in the batting order and hit into a double play trying to bunt yesterday. But on the other hand he dashed almost to first base to rob Len Smith of a hit in the seventh.

Tornow and Van Wyck had bad days at the plate. Each fanned three times. Les Smith fanned twice to top the Kaws.

Wesley Farrell, Indiana—Gave Sen-ators seven hits, smacked home run himself to win, 3-1.

Al Lopez, Robins—Singled in ninth to drive in O'Donell with run that beat Cubs.

Ralph Kress, Browns—Connected for two doubles and three singles in double header with Yankees.

Frank Watt, Phillies—Held Reds to five hits, beat them 7-1.

RED BIRDS, MILLS PLAY THREE GAMES IN ONE AFTERNOON

One Game Forfeited by Birds When Leibold Refuses to Leave Park

BY WILLIAM WEEKES
Associated Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO—(AP)—It may not be a record, but Columbus and Minneapolis have gotten off to a three regular season American association baseball games in one day—in one afternoon, in fact.

Along with watching three decisions chalked up in one afternoon, Columbus fans probably haven't seen so much excitement in years and years as they did during the Miller series which closed yesterday.

With Manager Harry (Nemo) Leibold of the Red Birds, the cause of it all. Leibold so vigorously protested a decision in the second game of yesterday's doubleheader that Umpire Larry Goetz ordered him from the field. It was the third time during the series that Leibold was asked to absent himself from the premises, and he refused to leave. Goetz therefore forfeited the game to Minneapolis.

Play Extra Game
To give the crowd its promised entertainment of two full ball games, President L. S. MacPhail of Columbus, and president-manager Mike Kelley of Minneapolis, agreed to play off the first game of the next Miller Bird series at Columbus.

The day was profitable for Minneapolis which won two and lost one, and Kelley's band was in third place today, two games away from the lead and one and one-half games behind the St. Pauls.

Butte Des Morts Golfers Beaten By Nakoma Team

Nakoma Country Club golfers repelled the invasion of Appleton braves here Saturday afternoon when they defeated a team from the Butte des Morts country club, Appleton, 38 to 21.

Maynard Reiseron, youthful Nakoma Country club star and a member of the University of Wisconsin golf team this past spring, administered a defeat to Frank Murphy, another Wisconsin player, and turned in a brilliant 73 in doing so. His mark was the best of the entire meet and was only two strokes over par.

Dropping two strokes to par on the first nine, Reiseron tightened up on the incoming nine and played even with par.

George Vitense, Butte des Morts professional and a former Madison boy, hooked up in a closely contested match with Herbie Spaunum, Nakoma pro, and honors were all even at the finish, both scoring 74's and each winning one nine.

WES FERRELL HITS HOME RUN TO BEAT WASHINGTON, 3 TO 1

Babe, Lou and Lazzeri Homer but St. Louis Browns Win, 9-7

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Staff Writer

WESLEY FERRELL, big right handed mound ace of the Cleveland Indians, not only is winning his share of games on the hill, but he is batting well above the .400 mark and often hitting "em when they count."

Yesterday he not only held the mighty Washington Senators to seven hits in a duel with Alvin Crowder but he won the game with a home run, his fourth of the season. Ferrell hit for the circuit in the seventh inning, breaking a 1-1 tie. In the next frame Morgan hit another homer to make the final score 3-1.

Wesley's brother, Rick, who catches for the St. Louis Browns, also hit a homer yesterday to assume one of the featured roles in another surprising baseball tale. His four bagger added the Browns in winning their second victory of the day over the New York Yankees. St. Louis took the first game 9-7 despite Babe Ruth's thirteenth homer, Lou Gehrig's fourteenth and one by Lazzeri to bring a game losing streak, then they continued their clouting to win the second 8-2.

The defeats of Washington and the Yanks put the Philadelphia Athletics in a safer place than they have held for the past few days. The A's won their fifth straight game, nosing out Chicago 6 to 5, and increasing their lead to four games.

Boston won the other American league clash, beating Detroit 7-6 by means of Earl Webb's homer in the seventh inning.

Among the National league leaders the situation also became tense as St. Louis improved its position with an even break in a double header with the Boston Braves. Frankhouse and Brandt stopped the Cards with five hits to win the first game 6-2. They gave the same number of blows off socks Seibold, but young Pepper Martin came through with a homer behind Grimes' equally good hurrying and St. Louis won the second 1-0.

Cubs Beaten
With a chance to register a gain, the New York Giants lost a half game when their defense fell apart in the eleventh inning of a battle with the Pittsburgh Pirates. Two errors in the eleventh enabled the Pirates to overcome the effects of Grantham's four misplays earlier in the game and win 5-4. Philadelphia kept on even terms in its private race with Pittsburgh for sixth place by beating Cincinnati 7 to 1. The Phils piled up 20 hits while Frank Watt held the Reds to five.

Brooklyn continued its stern chase of the leaders by beating the Chicago Cubs to tie the Phils. The weakened in the ninth inning and gave the Cubs three runs and a tie before Dazzy Vance came to his rescue. Then the Robins came through with the winning run in their half of the ninth and handed the Dazzler his fifth straight victory.

TRANS-SIPPI TITLE WON BY JOHN GOODMAN
Minneapolis—(AP)—The Trans-Mississippi championship golf trophy was back in Omaha today, taken there by Johnny Goodman. He won it by his 5 and 4 victory over Les-hie Edolad of St. Paul in the final match at Golden Valley course here Saturday.

The young insurance salesman won the honors from one of the largest and fastest fields in history of the association and after he made the course record of 70 made in the qualifying round by Billy Sixty of Milwaukee. Goodman held the title in 1927.

Goodman took the lead on the second hole of the 28-hole championship match and never relinquished it.

Missing easy putts seemed to be the chief reason for Edolad's downfall, but he left himself unfavorable lies with his approach shots and needed at least two putts on every green, including the short holes.

LUTHERAN SOFTBALL TEAM BEATS TUTTLES
Lion Lutheran society softball team of the Lutheran league beat the Tuttle Press company of the American League Friday evening, 6 and 3. The Lion team led all the way. Voracy and Gresser worked for the winners and Purdy tossed for the Pressmen.

A big seventh inning during which three runs were chased over the plate gave the Appleton Merchants a 5 and 3 victory over Shiocton yesterday afternoon at the village.

Orville Refke again was on the mound for the Merchants and allowed seven scattered hits which resulted in a lone run in the first, sixth and ninth innings. He struck out eight batters. Schultz of Shiocton gave 12 hits and whiffed seven batters.

Shiocton was the first to score, getting a run before the Merchants warmed up when D. Schultz drew a walk and scored on an error and a hit by Morse. The Merchants evened the count in the fourth when Laubs hit and scored on another hit by Tormow.

The Tormows then stepped out in front by a one run margin in the sixth but the Merchants staged a comeback in the seventh with three runs and took a 4 and 2 lead. Both teams tallied one run in the ninth inning.

R. Tormow turned in the field gems of the day with two great catches. Pete King played his last game with the Merchants because he soon is leaving the city.

In other league games New London beat Readfield 11 and 7 in a ten inning battle and Weyauwega defeated Tustin in 10 innings, 2 and 1.

Chapter 16

BRUCE'S ENTRANCE CUE

As Bruce turned toward Tony with a look of studied indifference, Ann went to the foot of the stairs and called: "Pierre, oh, Pierre! Supper's about ready."

"Comin'," shouted Pierre, and the next minute he ran joyously into the living room.

"Hello, everybody," he called.

"How's the bookkeeping, Pa Bevis? Every little old balance balancing?"

Martin, Ann and Old Tony laughed, but Bruce turned away in disgust.

"All but 39 cents, Pierre," said Martin.

"Too bad—naughty little 39 cents," Pierre returned. Then, addressing Bruce, he said: "Ahem! And what is your opinion of the Wall Street situation today, Mr. Cauchy?"

Again the three laughed. But Bruce said in a tone of disgust, "Aw, cut the comedy, will you? You're not so funny."

Pierre bowed, burlesquing a courtier, and in the manner of a grandiloquent Shakespearean actor, replied: "I pray thee pardon thy poor fool, sir, as my antics fail to please, I'll trade cap and bells for an interest table, though methinks to please a money juggler of a mountebank were a sorry jest."

Ann and Tony laughed again. But Bruce cried angrily, "For Pete's sake lay off, will you?" Then to Ann, "Come on, Ann, why don't we eat?" He seated himself at the table.

Ann brought dishes of food for the table while Pierre, going to Old Tony, said, "I'm awfully glad you came over this afternoon. Father Tony I'm going to miss you like the devil, but I'll be thanking you for all you've been to me." He threw his arm around the old actor's shoulders.

Ann paused to gaze at them sympathetically. Martin, too, watched them with interest.

"Well, hark! Bruce impatiently, 'are you folks coming to supper or not?'"

Ann looked at her husband and father with anger and shame.

"Bruce," she exclaimed in an undertone, "how can you be so rude?" She turned, and said heatedly, "Come, Father Tony, you'll have supper with us, of course."

Pierre echoed the invitation gaily. The old actor hesitated wistfully, but Bruce and Martin were insistent and he said, "I'm sorry, Ann—I'd like to, but I'd better not stay this evening." To Pierre he added anxiously, "You are really going in the morning, Pierre?"

Pierre patted him on the back reassuringly, "Sure as the sunrise, Father Tony."

Ann gave him his hat and Pierre went with him into the hall. The old actor turned and with thin dignity said: "Good evening, Ann, good evening, Bruce, Martin."

Bruce and Martin returned gruffly: "Goodby."

Pierre, gaily taking his seat at the table, looked questioningly from the painfully silent Ann to Bruce and Martin. It was very evident that the harmony of the little family was strained. But Pierre's spirits were too high to be subdued and, partially for that reason, partially from sympathy for Ann, he excited himself to relieve the tension.

"Alas!" he cried melodramatically, "Hot biscuits, as I live! By all the gods I swear, there's no skilful thine to conjure up such cookery. How shall I, in New York, live without my Lady Ann's hot biscuits?"

Bruce groaned, but Ann and Martin laughed.

"Better change your mind about being an actor," said Martin. "Tend to your own business. You're a head-minded job, but soda jerks eat regular, which is more than most actors do."

"Soda jerk!" cried Pierre. "Space me, good sir, 'tis a part I do not crave to play." More seriously he continued: "But the role has advanced. My time at the soda fountain has not been wasted. An actor, you know, must play many parts."

Pierre rose and in the manner of a showman announced, "With your kind permission, I will present the master artist of the soft drink fraternity."

Throwing his napkin over his arm with a magnificent gesture he approached Ann. Then bending over, and offering an imaginary menu, he murmured: "Does madam desire to order something, please?"

"I'll have a malted milk chocolate, with egg," laughed Ann.

"With another bow, the waiter said, 'Yes, madam. I thank you, madam,' and going to an imaginary soda fountain he proceeded with a flourish to mix the imaginary drink which he then, with an elegant gesture, placed before the lady. Then turning to Bruce and Martin, with a bow, he asked: 'And what would the gentlemen like, please? I have sweets for the sweet, and nuts for the nuts.'"

"Aw, cut it out!" shouted Bruce. "You act like a darned half-wit."

"Yes, sir, thank you, sir," returned the bowing waiter. "And now, if you please, observe the wretched amateur."

By this time Ann and Martin were heartily enjoying the exhibition, and even Bruce was becoming interested. Following the applause, in which Bruce joined in a half-hearted way, Pierre presented various well-known characters as they patronized the soda fountain.

When the various characterizations were finished, the audience of three applauded vigorously and Pierre bowed his thanks.

As they rose from the table, Bruce said suddenly: "I've got to go to you, kid, when it comes to acting. Then, as he went into his bedroom, he added: 'Don't go away. I want to see you.'"

Pierre and Ann were alone. Ann stood gazing at the young man with more admiration than she realized.

"Oh, Pierre," she said slowly, "must you go away to that school to study acting? Why don't you go on the stage now? I have never seen an actor who could compare with you!"

"I have a long way to go before I can attempt a part in a real play," he returned seriously. "I know I have something, because Father Tony says so, and because mother used to say that some day I would be a real artist—but mothers are that way."

"But, Pierre, surely Father Tony knows—he was an actor himself. And Father Tony says your mother was the most wonderful actress he ever saw."

Pierre continued: "When I played kid parts on the stage, mother used to say that the most important thing is the actor's exit. A lot of people hold that an actor's entrance is all important, just as some folks are always bragging about their families and all that. But it's the actor's exit lines—the way he leaves the stage that establishes the character."

"Take Jesus, for example," he continued reverently. "Jesus didn't make much of an entrance—born in a manger, in an old cow shed! But look at His exit. It impressed His divine character upon the whole world for all time and eternity."

With agonized face uplifted and arms extended as on a cross, Pierre acted the crucifixion, while Ann, under the spell of his acting, unconsciously assumed the attitude of a worshiper.

Then Pierre said: "Just before mother died she talked about her 'exit' and made me feel that death was no more than stepping off stage, into the wings after playing your part. And she said that when she had made her exit she would be standing in the wings. That's why I've got to go to school and make myself the kind of actor mother wants me to. That's why I can't give up my school money to Bruce or to any one else—not if I knew it would bring me millions. You do understand, don't you, Ann?"

Ann impulsively moved closer to him and, putting her hands on his shoulders, said: "I do understand, Pierre dear! Of course you must be true to yourself, my Pierre. No matter what Bruce or my father says you must not think of letting Bruce have a penny of your school money for his gold mining scheme. You won't fill you, dear?—it would be wicked."

Neither Pierre nor Ann noticed that Bruce was standing in the doorway to his room watching them and listening to her words.

BANKERS PRAISE PROMISE OF U. S. TO AID GERMANY

See It as Constructive Development in Foreign Affairs

BY CHARLES F. SPEARE
Copyright, 1931, By Cons. Press
Wall Street, New York—(CFA)—
Bankers who have been identified with foreign financing went so far Saturday as to characterize the news from Washington that President Hoover has initiated efforts for the relief of Germany as "the most constructive development that has taken place in foreign affairs since the end of the war."

There was immediate response to the announcement that this country is considering steps that may be taken "to assist in economic recovery both here and abroad," by markets for stocks and domestic and foreign bonds.

It was felt in Wall Street that the Washington announcement came at the moment when it would have an important psychological effect in industrial and in political circles. It is generally believed that the change in the status of the administration followed conferences which Secretary Mellon has had in London with the prime minister of England and with the governor of the bank of England. They were able to give him information regarding the state of affairs in Germany, which had become much more serious since Mr. Mellon left the United States a fortnight ago.

In spite of the advance in the discount rate of the bank of Germany on Monday, that institution has been losing gold and foreign exchange until the reserve of the Reichbank Saturday was close to the 40 per cent minimum. It was announced Saturday afternoon that the three or four large private banks in Berlin had granted the government a credit of 250,000,000 reichsmarks in order to cover government debts which are near maturity. This loan was made on the basis of 9 per cent interest.

Should Creek Outflow
One effect of the announcement that the United States has taken a more sympathetic attitude toward the crisis in Germany should be to check the outflow of foreign capital in Germany and also stop the "flight of the mark." French and American lenders have been withdrawing funds from Germany this month and have been refusing to renew credits when they become due. The fact that the United States government now takes the attitude that it must play a part in helping Germany to carry on changes the whole attitude of the banking world toward German credits.

It is too early to speculate on what form American support for the German situation may take. The most logical method of assisting her would be to defer for some stated time the payments which are being made by different countries to the United States, but which depend on the reparation payments originating in Germany. In spite of the reduced amount of annual reparation payments set up under the Dawes plan in 1924, the decline in commodity prices and the industrial reaction that has occurred in Germany make her situation as a debtor much more serious today than it was when the debt terms were revised for all time, as everyone thought then—in the winter of 1930.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER
GRADUATE AT U. OF W.
Madison—(AP)—Out of all the hundreds of students who graduated from the University of Wisconsin at commencement exercises today, only one had the distinction of graduating with mother.

She is Mary Coulson, who with her mother, Mrs. R. C. Coulson, was a model housewife and an ardent student at the same time. The Coulson family has been a part of the Madison household for many years. Mrs. Coulson and her daughter took an academic course with a few to teaching. The former maintained a household in addition to keeping abreast of her scholastic work in teaching during the past year both mother and daughter instructed Chester, the junior member of the Coulson household, who was student at Wisconsin high school.

During her freshman year, Mrs. Coulson learned that one could not be a model housewife and an ardent student at the same time. "I thought my home ought to be a wreck and span as it was when that was my chief business," she said. As a result I found myself working until early in the morning on my studies. I lost 40 pounds in my freshman year. Since then I found that my home managed to run nicely without minute attention to details.

In addition to her household and school work, Mrs. Coulson found time to study at a Madison art school.

Last week the farmers of Outagamie were cultivating corn and planting cabbage on the majority of the farms. Corn has improved rapidly since the recent rains so far have all other crops except pastures and hay. Hay is light and too near the harvesting time to improve very much. Some of the most remarkable improvements are in wheat, rye and oats. The corn and peas crop is very promising and the cutting of the most advanced fields will begin the latter part of next week. So far corn is a good crop, barley fair, oats fair, winter wheat, good, rye on light soil, poor, and on heavy soil fair, canning peas, good, and pasture poor. There are a great many variations in the conditions of the crops and the above estimates are nothing more than averages. Beside the work that was being done in corn and cabbage fields a great effort was made by some farmers to stop Canada thistles, mustard and sow thistles from going to seed.

In some quarters, the drought has either severely damaged or killed evergreen trees, early cabbage, cucumbers, potatoes and garden vegetables. So far pests are not injuring the principal farm crops very seriously but complaints are made about potato bugs, cutworms and grubs.

Two or three pairs of water plovers over the roots of a small, willow tree, probably revive it. Lack of water is killing evergreen trees in some places.

The pests that are killing early cabbage plants set out in the fields are plant lice. The symptoms of this infestation is rolled leaves covering large numbers of lice in the folds. Cabbage lice or aphids are controlled by the use of contact emulsions such as kerosene emulsion and whale oil.

Kerosene emulsion is prepared by combining one-half pound of whale-oil soap, or 1 quart of soft soap with one gallon of water. The soap is dissolved in boiling water and then poured while still boiling hot (away from the fire) into the kerosene. The mixture is then churned rapidly for about five minutes, pumping the liquid back upon itself by means of a force pump and direct-discharge nozzle throwing a fine spray of white still boiling hot (away from the fire) into the kerosene. The mixture is then churned rapidly for about five minutes, pumping the liquid back upon itself by means of a force pump and direct-discharge nozzle throwing a fine spray of white still boiling hot (away from the fire) into the kerosene.

The cucumber beetle is already doing considerable damage and it will do more as its numbers increase if the growers make no interference. To control this pest dust plants with air slaked lime and paris green or with arsenate of lead. Repeat at intervals as often as the pest appears. Arsenate of lead (powder) or paris green is applied dry with 1 ounce to 3 to 4 pounds sifted air slaked lime or flour. Another control is covering the plants with hill protectors.

Cutworm damaging sweet corn and other garden products may be controlled by the use of a poisoned bait consisting of 3 pounds of bran, 2 ounces of white arsenate or paris green. Dissolve 1 ounce salt and 2 ounces cheap syrup in a small quantity of water. Mix thoroughly and mash. Scatter small amounts of the bait about the plants at night.

To protect cabbage plants set in the field, Green Bay commercial gardeners place a three-inch square of tar paper about each plant at the

Fishing Has Not Been Injured By Low Water

BY B. A. CLAPLIN

I am writing this article from a window that overlooks one of the most beautiful lakes of the whole famous Eagle chain of northern Wisconsin—the country of grand scenery, old Indian traditions and big fish.

Speaking of fish—as I write, I see a man coming up the winding trail from the boat landing, and he carries as fine a specimen of what draws thousands of people to this playground every season as I have seen this year. It's a musky, and it's a good one. I judge from here that it will weigh at least 30 pounds.

And, oh yes, behind him comes his fishing partner, and he also has something that shows him to be a real fisherman. His catch looks like several wall-eyes, averaging perhaps three pounds apiece.

The consensus of opinion among outdoor writers up to recently was that the fishing this season would be very poor, because of the low stage of water that has prevailed during the spring months, but it has not worked out that way. Whenever I go I meet with reports of wonderful catches being made daily.

The Eagle Chain of waters consists of 27 lakes of various sizes. They are drained by the Eagle river, and right here I want to speak of a condition that is unprecedented.

I refer to the musky population in that river this year. Oldtimers tell me that never before have they known of these fish being so plentiful there as they now are. The river literally teems with them, although they are small as muskies go, the average being perhaps 30 inches in length.

So far as general fishing goes, it must not be assumed that all one has to do is hook on a bait and cast it into any water one comes to and expect to hook a musky. That cannot be done, although now and then the unexpected does happen and some lucky angler takes a nice specimen right from a dock of some resort, as happened here not so long ago, when a Chicago man who had never fished before, caught a twenty eight pound musky casting out from the boathouse to try out his reel before starting out on a fishing trip.

Generally speaking, one must take a boat and travel away from civilization into some quiet bay or weed-bed and then work for his fish. But they are there for the angler who is diligent and patient.

The Lac du Flambeau waters are yielding good catches of muskies, pike and wall-eyes every day. Some very good fish are being caught right now in Trout Lake, in Lost Lake and in the St. Germain chain of waters. And they are hitting the plugs of about every description.

AIR ARMY FIRST IN EFFICIENCY IS ITALY'S AIM

Country's Fleet Now Stands Third With France and Russia Leading

Rome—(AP)—Italy is seeking to make its air force the most efficient in the world. The reorganized overhead army of 1,500 planes claims third position, in numbers after those of France and Russia.

For the moment no great additions are planned, but better training and better craft are on the program of the unified air ministry headed by Italo Balbo, the black-bearded member of Mussolini's cabinet who led his men on the memorable squadron flight to South America in January.

Air maneuvers with hundreds of fighting craft in mimic war over northern and central Italy this summer are expected to add much to the battle qualities of the 1,863 officers and 20,000 men. Defense of the industrial centers, ports and military reservations is the staff problem to be worked out.

For six years Italy has been spending about $30,000,000 a year, which is the present budget. This, it is commented in parliament, is about half what France spends. It is admitted that France has more planes, but parliamentary commissions say superiority isn't determined by numbers.

Under Balbo there is a formidable group of flashing young officers, with high rank and extremely well-cut uniforms. There are five squadron generals, 26 brigade and division generals, 68 colonels and 1,003 captains, majors and lieutenant colonels, all in combatant and navigating ranks. There are the usual other staffs besides.

Find Remains Of Extinct Beast Of 40,000 Years Ago

Bradenton, Fla.—(AP)—An extinct beast armored like a miniature war tank moved through the Florida jungles 40,000 years ago. It was the giant armadillo, whose hide was bite-proof.

Part of its armor, and bones and teeth have been discovered near here by Walter W. Holmes, field worker in paleontology for the American Museum of Natural History, and his associate, James E. Moore of Sarasota. This is the first specimen ever found of a new genus of armadillos, and has been named Holmesina septentrionalis, in honor of Mr. Holmes.

The hard, bony plates that covered the giant armadillo's back were flexible as the chain mail of King Arthur's knights. When danger threatened the animal could roll up in a ball that was tough enough to discourage even the saber-toothed tiger, which also lived in Florida in those days.

Including its tall the giant armadillo must have been nearly six feet long and as large around as a man, says Holmes. Its teeth show that it was a vegetarian. They have flat surfaces for grinding food instead of points for biting.

The giant armadillo died out, perhaps because the Florida climate did not remain warm enough to produce the food it needed. It is suggested by Barnum Brown, curator of fossil reptiles at the museum. There are no armadillos in Florida today.

The ancestors of the giant armadillo, scientists believe, migrated from South America to Florida after the isthmus of Panama rose from the sea.

WEEK MARKED BY DEFEAT OF POWER PROGRAM

Legislature Also Votes for Adjournment on June 27

BY WILLIAM THOMPSON

Madison—(P)—The end of the sixth regular session of the Wisconsin legislature was set for June 27 when the senate last week concurred in an assembly amendment to a joint resolution.

Last week witnessed the largest rupture of the administration's power program in the senate, defeat of the interim committee on education proposal for a central board of education in the assembly, and final consideration of a hundred or more other measures which had been slugging the legislative machinery for several weeks.

Defeat of the Loomis municipal utility competition bill, permitting town, city and village utilities to compete with privately owned concerns, was a bitter blow to the administration. This measure constituted the fourth plank of the power program and was regarded by its proponents as the "heart of the plan."

While the Loomis bill was reversed in the upper house the assembly passed the state public utility corporation bill, fifth and last division of the power program. The bill creates a new state department for administration of the new power laws.

The senate also killed a bill for a public utility counsel, who would have been a deputy attorney general assigned to aid in the organization and development of public-owned utilities. The Lange bill, companion to the Loomis utility corporation measure, was non-concurred in.

Two years' work of the legislative interim committee on education went unrewarded as the lower house refused to approve E. J. Riecke's bill for a central state board of education. Eight major boards and a score of minor groups would have been unified under the plan and the office of state superintendent of public instruction would have been supplanted by a state commission of education.

Assemblyman Harold Groves, Madison, introduced a substitute amendment to the Foss-Goodland unemployment relief measure, cutting the proposed $5,000,000 appropriation in half and postponing a planned survey of income.

An assembly bill providing for a new corrupt practices act, introduced by J. W. Carow, Ladysmith, was defeated in the senate after conservatives had introduced numerous "drastic amendments, one of which would have given corporations the right to participate in political campaigns. Progressives waged war against the bill mainly because of this amendment.

The small loans question was given attention by both houses. Following senate defeat of the Groves bill regulating the small loans business through the state banking department, the upper house sent a bill for outright repeal of the small loans law to the assembly. On ruling of Speaker Charles B. Barry, the measure, introduced by Sen. P. F. Smith, Eau Claire, was returned to the senate as the Hall repeal bill, considered two weeks before, was identical in content.

According to the speaker's ruling, two bills with identical provisions cannot be introduced in either the senate or assembly during one legislative session. Advocates of a small loans repealer may, however, introduce a duplicate bill in the assembly inasmuch as the Hall repealer originated in the senate.

The joint committee on congressional reapportionment brought in a bill to both houses Friday after studying numerous plans for the past three weeks. The bill makes a change in every district, and places Congressman James Frear, Hudson, and Gerald Boleau, Wausau, in the same district. In view of the 1930 census, the legislature must slice away one of the 11 districts in Wisconsin.

We have certain injunctions against bidding an original No Trump. The most frequently recurring is that where an unprotected two card suit is held. This naturally includes singletons and void suits, even though the singleton might be an Ace. A second is that a No Trump should not ordinarily be bid when having but two suits stopped.

However, there will at times arise a situation where the minimum Quick Trick requirement of a hand is so greatly exceeded that some action must be taken. Since it is not advisable to bid a suit which one is unwilling to play with normal assistance in partner's hand, a No Trump may have to be the bid if, as in the above deal, the suits which contain the high card holding are less than four in length. To do so, however, requires four Quick Tricks in hand rather than 2 to 2½ ordinarily prescribed for an opening No Trump bid.

Salient Points of Bidding

Contract: In accordance with the preamble, South opens the bidding with one No Trump, and West passing, North bids two Clubs, rather than make an immediate assist of the No Trump, for he holds a singleton Heart, East passes and South, reading the two Club bid as encouraging, which it should be at Contract, takes a chance on the Diamond suit for he has four to the Ten and it should take little in North's hand to prevent opponents running off any great number of tricks in that suit. Accordingly, he bids three No Trumps, which concludes the bidding.

The Play

West opens the Queen of Hearts and the trick is taken by Declarer with the King. Declarer leads a small Club, plays the Jack from Dummy and East, having the Ace of Diamonds over North's King, refuses to take the trick. Clubs are continued and East must play his Ace on the third round. A small Heart is returned by East and Declarer takes the trick with the Ace. Dummy is put in the lead with the Queen of Spades to make the two long Clubs. Declarer then takes his Ace and King of Spades, which gives him nine tricks and game.
